4 Governors, Staffs Confer on Relief for Beleaguered Berlin

Rations Tightened In U. S. Colony; Report Rail Link Is Fixed Spurs Hope

Berlin, Sept. 1 (U.P.).—The four chiefs of Germany and their technical advisers conferred today on relief for blockaded Berlin, as United States authorities tightened food rations for Americans in the isolated city.

Hope that the blockade might soon be lifted was seen in a German newspaper report from Magdeburg in the Soviet zone, stating that Russian-zone railway officials had pronounced the railway between Berlin and the West fit to handle "any sort of freight and passenger traffic."

The railroad had officially been closed for "repairs."

Another Meeting Today

The military governors of the conquered country met for nearly three hours late today to discuss the problems referred by the Moscow conferences.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, U. S. commander, said a third meeting would be held Thursday.

Earlier, American and British deputy governors had conferred with four-power transportation experts on plans for lifting the 74-day-old blockade.

Four-power trade and finance committees also met during the day.

American food rations were tightened for the first time since the Russians barred rail and water traffic to the four-power capital late in June. Controls were ordered for 11 basic items, including bacon, coffee, tea, sugar and bakers' chocolate.

The tightened ration was aimed at ending the sale of critical foods on the black market. There was as yet no serious threat of food shortage in air-supplied western Berlin.

Council to Try Again

Germans here and elsewhere in Germany reacted in various ways to the four-power attempt to solve the Berlin crisis:

1. At Bonn, in the British zone, a German assembly met to draw up a constitution for western Germany. Formation of a separate western state had been sponsored by the Western Allies despite strong Russian protests.

2. The predominantly non-Communist Berlin City Council, prevented from meeting twice last week by Communist mobs, decided to try another meeting Friday.

3. Businessmen and black marketers here began to sell west German marks short, anticipating a four-power agreement which would make the Soviet-issued Ostmark the only legal currency for Berlin.

Benes Remains Unconscious as 37th Hour Passes

Prague, Sept. 1 (AP).—Former President Eduard Benes was still unconscious tonight and in an "extremely serious" condition, his doctors reported.

The 65-year-old former President has been unconscious since 5 a. m. Tuesday.

The doctors' bulletin, reporting on his condition as of 6 p. m. (noon, EDT), said his temperature had lowered to normal, but his blood pressure was being kept up "only by the highest medical efforts." Several small improvements bore no promise of any general improvement in the patient's condition, the doctors added.

Effects on Humans Not Known

Polio Halted in Tests on Mice By New Drug, Columbia Says

Preliminary Study Begun With Persons; Much Work Remains

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Polio in mice has been halted by a new sulfa-like drug called darvisul, it was announced last night by Columbia University of New York.

The drug has also been used successfully to immunize other mice, and mice cured by it could not be reinfected with the virus disease.

Similar tests for darvisul are now under way on 100 rhesus monkeys, and preliminary investigations have begun on humans, according to Dr. Murray Sanders, associate professor of bacteriology at Columbia and one of the pioneers in development of the drug.

Last night's announcement was made by the university over the expressed objections of Dr. Sanders, and accompanied by his personal statement designed to forestall misinterpretations of the scientific findings.

"At the present writing," Dr. Sanders said, "we do not know what effect darvisul has on human poliomyelitis."

The drug, a nontoxic compound,

said its developers, works on a new principle of attacking virus. Instead of going after the virus directly, it appears to react on the tissue cell itself, fortifying the cell and making it an unsatisfactory site for virus growth.

Initial laboratory tests of the compound failed to affect mouse virus. When the mouse virus was placed in cell-free serum with the compound the disappearance of the infectious agent followed the normal deterioration curve. This curve had been predetermined by test tube investigations.

For comparison, the drug was placed in embryonic mouse brain

3 State Officials Had Charged That Subversives Got in With Delegations

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

A committee of private citizens, appointed by Secretary Marshall, reported yesterday that it could find no basis for the charge that "several hundred" subversive aliens had entered the United States on United Nations credentials.

The charge was made to a Senate Immigration Subcommittee on July 15 by three minor State Department officials and was widely reported at home and abroad. Secretary Marshall promptly appointed a committee of inquiry headed by Benjamin M. McKelway, editor of the Evening Star, to get at the facts.

Other members of the inquiry committee were James H. Rowe, former Assistant Attorney General, and Marcellus H. Sheild, for 28 years clerk of the House Appropriations Committee, who retired in 1944.

Three Officials Castigated

The committee reported that it was "shocked by the manner in which these serious charges were made," and it had scathing things to say about the "irresponsible" and "capricious" testimony of the State Department officials.

"Subordinate officials of a non-policymaking division of the Department of State testified at a public hearing on a matter of high policy," the report said, "before a Senate subcommittee presided over and directed by staff employes with no Senator present.

"So far as we are aware, this practice is without precedent. The testimony produced serious repercussions on the foreign policy of the United States and that testimony was irresponsible in its lack of factual support."

Misgivings Unreported

The committee added that, as far as it could discover, the officials who testified "had never made any persistent effort" to bring their misgivings about U. N. credentials to the attention of responsible policy-making officials.

The three who testified were Robert C. Alexander, assistant chief of the visa division; William M. Harlow, chief of the diplomatic visa section, and R. Clyde Larkin, chief of the public safety and security section.

He Knew of No Spies

During the committee's two-week inquiry it drew from Alexander the statement that "he knows of no spies, no terrorists or saboteurs or aliens found fomenting discord who have been brought into this country for United Nations purposes."

However, the committee reported, Alexander "classes as potentially subversive all aliens admitted to the United States from Communist or Communist-controlled countries, or aliens who,

Presidential Rivals to Use New Tactics

Dewey to Backtrack Sallies by Warren; Truman, Barkley To Use Trains, Planes

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Something new in presidential barnstorming technique was promised yesterday as Republican and Democratic camps hinted these contrasting strategies:

1. An eastward campaign swing by Gov. Earl Warren of California, with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey backtracking him westward to deliver a "one-two" punch in the same States. Both will ride special trains for the most part, and slug hardest in the Senate-race States.

2. A train-plane duet by President Harry S. Truman and Senator Alben W. Barkley. Mr. Truman will stick mostly to the rails, where the voters can glimpse him, and Mr. Barkley will swoop down on other States from the air.

In these other developments:

A fifth liberal group—the Liberal Party of New York—indorsed the Truman-Barkley ticket. Previously the CIO-PAC, the executive board of the CIO, Americans for Democratic Action, and a private committee of most AFL union heads had pledged their support to the President.

Harrison at White House

George Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Clerks and organizing chairman of the new AFL Truman committee, called at the White House with Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath. Harrison said he told Mr. Truman leaders of AFL unions having seven million of AFL's eight million members are supporting him.

The CIO-PAC voted unanimously to back the Truman-Barkley ticket, following up Tuesday's 35-to-12 indorsement by the CIO executive board. Murray announced the PAC action at the White House. With Jack Kroll, CIO-PAC director, and three other CIO leaders, he called on the President to pledge their help.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), another White House caller, told reporters Mr. Truman will make several campaign appearances in Connecticut next month. McMahon said Truman has "a splendid chance" of carrying the State.

Pennsylvania 'Deal' Charged

Republican National Chairman Hugh D. Scott, jr., who has predicted a Republican landslide, told a Rotary Club luncheon in Philadelphia Henry Wallace's Progressives and the Democratic Party have made a "deal" in Pennsylvania. He said the deal calls for withdrawal of all but one of the Wallace candidates for Congress in the Keystone State.

First cue to the GOP's "double punch" strategy to wrap up the Presidential election early and put as many Senate seats as possible on ice came yesterday with Republican unveiling of the first lap of Governor Warren's cross-country tour.

Herbert Brownell, Dewey-Warren campaign manager, announced the Governor of California will leave Oakland, Calif., September 15 and invade 12 States in 19 days en route eastward to Detroit.

In other quarters it was reliably learned that Governor Dewey plans to leave Albany around September 20 and head westward

N. Y. Trucking Strike Perils Food Supply; Rails to Halt Freight

'Restricts' Unions, He Charges

Truman Calls Taft-Hartley Law Unfair, Urges Its Repeal

President Truman said yesterday that the Taft-Hartley Law "unfairly restricts" labor unions and their members and "should be repealed."

Mr. Truman said in a special Labor Day message that "better legislation on labor-management relations is an absolute necessity in the program to increase our economic strength and to improve our national standard of living."

He also renewed his appeals for inflation controls, an increase in the minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents an hour, adequate social security and health insurance programs and an "integrated" Labor Department "with adequate staff and adequate funds."

Mr. Truman said that "in general" labor, agriculture and business have worked together to boost national production and living standards despite "great stresses and strains."

He took cognizance of labor's efforts to get out the vote in the presidential elections this fall.

"It is to be hoped that every eligible voter—not just the customary minority of those eligible—will go to the polls and register in opinion on what course the United States should take in the days ahead. Then, the outcome will be the decision of all America."

The President said that free collective bargaining and the free enterprise system proved their strength during the "trying" years since the war.

". . . The production of American workers has helped to make our Nation the cornerstone in international efforts to bring about world recovery and prosperity and a lasting peace," he said.

"American labor has never wavered in its support of our bipartisan effort to win the peace by aiding other nations in their effort toward industrial recovery.

"Our goal now is to continue to increase our production and our standard of living.

"Equally important, we must improve the fairness of the distribution of the fruits of our labor."

Turning to the Labor Department, he said all workers lack the services which could be provided "by an integrated Department of Labor provided with adequate staff and adequate funds." It has been the contention of Mr. Truman and labor groups that the Republicans have weakened the department by carving away various functions.

President Urged To Act Before Supply Situation Becomes Critical

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—About 9500 AFL union truckers quit work today in a potentially critical walkout which quickly led railroads to order halting of most rail freight shipments to the metropolitan area.

Mayor William O'Dwyer conferred with union and employer representatives, then announced he did not expect an immediate settlement of the pay hike dispute.

The city will decide on measures to try to end the stoppage after a meeting of union delegates set for noon (EST) tomorrow, O'Dwyer said.

The mayor declared emergency supplies would be kept rolling.

The Association of American Railroads, which announced the embargo on rail freight, said it would apply to all carload or less-than-carload shipments destined for New York City, or New Jersey points from which the freight would be carried by boat to the metropolis.

Nearly all freight coming into New York is moved on trucks either from piers or rail terminals.

The embargo will be effective Thursday unless the strike is settled.

Fear Stoppage May Grow

City officials feared the stoppage might grow to the proportions of the 1946 trucking strike which seriously curtailed movement of food into the city and caused severe loss to many businesses.

Acting Police Commissioner Thomas F. Mulligan said he had suspended all days off for most members of the department for the duration of the work stoppage.

The men who walked out were members of Local 807, the largest unit of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters in the city. The local has about 13,000 members but many of them are at work under contracts not involved in the dispute.

Agreement Is Rejected

In balloting Local 807 rejected by more than two-to-one an agreement reached by its officers with the truck operators last week.

This called for a 15-cent-an-hour pay boost, but did not provide pensions and other benefits sought by the drivers and helpers. They originally had asked 50 cents an hour more.

Labor Revolt Thwarts New Schuman Plan

By Walter Ke
Post Reporter

Paris, Sept. 1 (NYHT.).—French organized labor—in both Communist and non-Communist federations—revolted today against the financial program Premier Robert Schuman described in the National Assembly yesterday.

They demanded immediate wage increases where he had denied them. They refused to go along with a policy of promises that talked of lower prices while they continued to mount.

Thus, Schuman's task of forming a new government was made more difficult on a day in which Force Ouvriere (Workers' Strength), the non-Communist labor organization, joined the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor (CGT) in a campaign to raise minimum wages. For nine months until today, Workers' Strength has sided with the government in power in efforts to halt the rising cost of living. It has abstained from wage demands, but now it has changed its mind.

Consequently the CGT was asking tonight for a new minimum wage of 13,500 francs a month ($45), instead of the current rate of 10,500 francs. Other salaries would be raised proportionately. Workers' Strength was asking for 13,350 francs a month, and proportionate increases. Pending the working out of such a plan, the two federations joined the country's third great labor federation, the Christian Workers Federation in demanding 3000 francs ($10) a month bonus to every worker.

[The Associated Press reported CGT has called a 24-hour strike of textile workers in the Lille area Thursday in protest against "the present governmental situation."—Editor's note.]

Fr. Walsh Hits FCC Ruling On Atheism

Right to Broadcast Views Is Defended By Rabbi Richman

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S.J., vice president of Georgetown University, told a House committee yesterday that an FCC ruling on broadcasts by atheists declared "by innuendo" a belief that "the existence of God is a controversial subject."

Preceding Father Walsh before the committee, Rabbi Paul Richman, representing the Synagogue Council of America, said atheists had "a constitutional right" to present their views, especially when attacked. He said he hoped, however, the FCC ruling would not be interpreted to mean opening the way for indiscriminate radio attacks on religion.

After yesterday's session, which concluded two days of hearings by the House Select Committee to investigate the FCC, Chairman Harness (D., Ind.) proposed that the FCC withdraw its ruling as the simplest way to end the controversy. The ruling, dating back to June 19, 1946, was handed down after Atheist Robert Harold Scott of Palo Alto, Calif., had demanded radio time to answer religious broadcasts.

In its Scott case ruling, the Radio Silenced; Fear Volcano Toll In S. Pacific Heavy

Manila (Thursday), Sept. 2 (AP).—The Times reported today 5620-foot Camiguin volcano on the island of the same name erupted yesterday and grave fear was felt for the safety of the islanders.

The last direct word from Camiguin came from a government radio operator on the south Philippine Island, who said panic was spreading among the people. Then the radio went silent.

The Times reported the eruption was preceded by a series of 15 earthquakes late Tuesday. Smoke then began to rise from the crater yesterday morning.

Camiguin Island is one of the smaller ones in the Philippines group. It lies off the northern coast of Mindanao.

Whitehurst, Highways Head Of D. C., Dies of Heart Attack

Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, 61, head of the District Highway Department, died about 4:15 a. m. yesterday at George Washington University Hospital.

Death was attributed to a heart attack. Captain Whitehurst had gone to work in his District Building office Monday morning, fresh from a vacation near Irvington, Va. Associates said he told them he had particularly enjoyed some fishing. He was stricken at his home Monday evening and taken to the hospital.

The Commissioners ordered flags on all District buildings to be flown at half staff until after the funeral. They also adopted a formal resolution of regret at Captain Whitehurst's death and of sympathy for his family. It said in part:

"Captain Whitehurst rendered 22 years of outstanding service in the District government. His ability and sterling integrity assured the District efficient, loyal and unselfish effort. His loss will be keenly felt, and his memory will be cherished by his many friends and associates. The Commissioners extend to his widow and family their heartfelt sympathy."

Last Book Asserted Late President Baited Japanese Into War

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 1.—Charles A. Beard, 73, dean of American historians, died of anemia today at Grace Memorial Hospital.

Beard, who wrote more than 30 books in his long career devoted to history and politics, entered the hospital on August 2.

His last historical work, published last April, accused President Franklin D. Roosevelt of setting up precedents which threatened American constitutional government.

The accusation was made in his book entitled, "President Roosevelt and the Coming of the War 1941, a Study of Appearances and Realities"

The book criticized President Roosevelt's foreign policy leading up to World War II and asserted Japan was "maneuvered" into firing the first shot of the war which the President considered "inevitable" as early as October, 1940.

Besides his wife Mary, who often collaborated with him in his writings, Beard is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Alfred Vagts of Gaylordsville, Conn., and a son, William of Alameda, Calif.

Private funeral services will be held at the convenience of the family, it was announced.

Dixiecrats Split Over Naming Of Electors

South Carolina Row Opens Way for Party Purge of Bolters

A split in the South Carolina Democratic executive committee, over naming a Dixiecrat presidential elector slate, yesterday opened the way for a long-expected party purge of Southern bolters.

Eight presidential elector candidates, pledged to vote in the electoral college for Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, Dixiecrat nominee, were named by the State executive committee at a meeting in Columbia, S. C., over the vigorous protest of a dissenting minority.

The dissenting group, headed by R. A. Jolly of Greenville, immediately moved for organization of a "regular" Democratic Party in South Carolina, which would enter a Truman-Barkley slate of electors.

Circulate Signatures

They started circulating for signatures a statement calling on the Democratic National Committee for recognition of their own group as the regularly constituted Democratic organization.

In Washington it was indicated that the Democratic National Committee would back up the new group "if it is properly organized."

The net effect of such recognition, when and if it comes, would be to crack down on the Dixiecrats of South Carolina, formally read them out of the party, and set a pattern for a Dixiecrat purge through the South.

Similar local moves for organization of a regular Democratic Party organization, pledged to the Truman-Barkley ticket, were under way in the two other Dixiecrat key States—Alabama and Mississippi.

'I'm Ruined,' Moans Mitchum, Arrested in Marijuana Raid

By Patricia Clary

Hollywood, Sept. 1 (U.P.).—Movie Hero Robert Mitchum, who was caught smoking marijuana a few hours before he was to have lectured adolescents on juvenile delinquency, said today that his arrest had ruined his home, his marriage and his career.

"I've been smoking marijuana for years," Mitchum told the officers who crashed into a blond starlet's hilltop home at midnight and found a cozy little "muggies" party under way. "I guess it's all over now. I'm ruined."

After eight hours in jail, his attorneys posted $1000 bail and the 31-year-old actor was released.

The youth forum, in which he was to have taken part on the steps of the City Hall today, went on without him.

Mitchum was charged with suspicion of violating the State Narcotics Act, a felony, and so were the three arrested with him—Starlet Lila Leeds, hostess at the party; Dancer Vickie Evans, her roommate, and Robin Ford, who said he was just trying to rent Miss Leeds' house to Mitchum.

Arraignment was set for September 8.

Russell Long, Chip Off the Old Block, Follows Path and Style of Father

When Senator Huey P. Long died in 1935 he left a chip off the old block, an ambitious elder son who is following his father to the United States Senate.

Russell Long, apparently elected in the Democratic primary with the support of his uncle, Gov. Earl K. Long, to serve the two remaining years of the term of the late Senator John Overton, will be 30 years old November 3—just old enough to meet the age qualification for the Senate.

RUSSELL B. LONG
Son of the "Kingfish"

Russell Long was 16 years old when his father, the Louisiana Kingfish, was shot down in a corridor of the State Capitol after having just finished directing passage of bills in one of his special legislative sessions, where legislators followed his bidding without question.

It didn't take long for the public to see that Russell had his father's flair for the spectacular, as well as his voice and face.

Flashy Student Campaign

When Russell Long in 1938 put on his drive for the presidency of the Louisiana State University student body, it was the flashiest and hottest campaign in the school's history.

He organized a corps of coeds to parade the campus in scanty bathing suits with "Long" painted in black on their bare backs. He used loudspeakers on trucks, a dance band, last-minute handbills and oratory: Windmill gestures and a torrential flow of stormy language.

He promised students a cooperative laundry and a straight-away bus service between the campus and Eaton Rouge, all without an additional increase in student fees. His father used to promise new highways, new bridges, free school books and "all with no increase in taxes."

Russell, who was studying law and specializing in debate, was elected. The students got the cooperative laundry and bus service he pledged.

The following June he married his college sweetheart, Katherine May Hattis, 19.

Changes His Mind

He said then, "At the time of Dad's death I told everybody—all my friends—I would never go into politics or have anything to do with it. But now I've changed my mind." Perhaps it was the whiff of successful campus politicking.

Russell Long was graduated from the university law school in 1942 and joined the Navy as an apprentice seaman under the V-7 program. He came out of the war a lieutenant, after having participated as a landing craft officer in the invasions of North Africa, Sicily, Anzio and southern France.

Long, who went into private law practice after his return from World War II, was waging his first campaign for public office when he sought the Senate seat by nomination in the just-held Democratic primary.

In the campaign, Russell defended his uncle's political record of governmental reorganization-spending and taxing (80 million dollars a year in added taxes).

And in typical Long style he told the voters of the sovereign State of Louisiana that he would fight any President of the United States who "tries to ride roughshod" over the interests of the Pelican State.

Peters a Top Red, Budenz Testifies

New York, Sept. 1 (U.P.).—Alexander Stevens, whom the Government seeks to deport as a revolution-seeking Red agent, was described today as an American Communist who wielded power as great as that formerly wielded by Earl Browder or Gerhart Eisler.

Stevens, also known as J. Peters, was accused at a deportation hearing by Louis F. Budenz, former editor of the Communist Daily Worker who renounced the party, became a Catholic and took a teaching post at Fordham University.

Budenz said that he took orders from Stevens over a three-year period and was assigned to meet members of the Soviet secret police. The meetings, he said, took place in various Childs Restaurants in New York and the Stevens Hotel in Chicago. He was directed to turn over information on anti-Stalin Trotskyite groups in the United States.

Called a Top Communist

Stevens, Budenz said, was a top Communist with power as great as Browder, once president of the United States Communist Party but since deposed and Eisler, whom the Government named as the No. 1 Kremlin agent in this country.

Budenz said that Stevens was the "J. Peters" who wrote a pamphlet entitled "The Communist Party—A Manual on Organization."

He said he first met Stevens in 1935. In March, 1936, he said, Stevens asked him if he knew that the most important function of the Communist Party was that of a conspiratorial apparatus.

Budenz to Testify Again

Budenz said Stevens told him the party was "like a submerged submarine and I saw only the periscope."

"He told me that he was engaged in getting information in Washington and Hollywood," Budenz testified. "He also said he was engaged in influencing high officials in the Government in Washington and that this was all a part of his underground activities."

The hearing was recessed shortly before noon until this morning. Budenz was expected to testify again and the Government was expected to call a final witness.

No Basis Found for Charge That Spies Use U. N. Papers

under the immigration laws—enacted previous to location of the United Nations headquarters in this country — normally would have been inadmissible as members of Communist organizations."

The committee described the presence of delegates and officials from "iron curtain" countries as a "calculated risk" implicit in locating the U. N. headquarters in the United States. But it failed to find any facts showing that "the risk is a matter of great concern."

It said the charges by the three officials were "an indiscriminate reflection on United Nations personnel, tended to weaken confidence of the American people in the United Nations and raise doubt as to the effectiveness of measures designed to protect our national security."

In Charleston, W. Va., Senator Chapman Revercomb, chairman of the Immigration Subcommittee, followed up the inquiry's report by saying he had asked Secretary Marshall for the names of persons who had entered under United Nations credentials. Revercomb said he had wanted to make his own investigation of the charges, but the Secretary had refused.

"Certainly," he said, "if a privately-appointed committee can go into this question, a committee of the Congress of the United States should not be interfered with in making its own investigation."

The McKelway committee reported ample safeguards in existing laws and regulations to prevent subversive aliens from entering under the cloak of the United Nations.

"There is a recognized degree of potential danger to our national security in the admission of aliens to this country who are antagonistic to our form of government and vigorous promoters of their own," it said.

But the committee argued that all U. N. officials admitted to this country, except for those at the top, are subject to prosecution under American criminal laws for illegal acts outside their official duties. And it recalled that even a top official, here under diplomatic immunity, could have his recall requested by the United States or could be declared persona non grata.

A State Department official said yesterday it was too early to say what action, if any, would be taken against the three subordinate officials involved.

At Chippewa Falls, Wisc., Senator Alexander Wiley, chairman of the full Senate Judiciary Committee, told the Associated Press that Revercomb's subcommittee was "seeking to get at the truth of whether or not subversive aliens were permitted to enter this country by any means."

"If any Government official, high or low, knows that foreign termites are entering this country," said Wiley, "it is his duty to report that fact to the appropriate officials."

Dixiecrats Split Over Naming Of Electors

nees under the present electoral set up, mandamus action may be brought to require the Secretary of State to oust the present electors, and to place other electors on the ballot who will vote for the Truman-Barkley ticket.

The Alabama law requires electors to "cast their ballots for the nominee of the National convention of the party by which they were elected." The Alabama Supreme Court, in an advisory opinion, said the statute was meaningless, and Truman-Barkley Democrats in the State plan a test of the ruling.

But it was the South Carolina move for recognition of a separate Democratic organization, in effect branding the Dixiecrats as "bolters" in the Thurmond ticket's cradle State, that could lead to a party purge of unprecedented proportions.

If the Democratic National Committee falls in line with the plan, informed observers said it would mean a political war through the South, surpassing even the aftermath of Al Smith's defeat in 1928 and following through into the campaigns of 1950 and 1952.

What helped touch off the fireworks in yesterday's Columbia, S. C., meeting were charges that Governor Thurmond actually is running for the Senate in 1952 rather than for President on the Dixiecrat ticket.

As a result, some supporters of Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), up for reelection in 1952, reportedly lined up behind the move for a "regular" State organization. Johnston has been the President's bitterest critic on the civil rights issue but has held rigorously aloof from the bolters.

In yesterday's Columbia (S. C.) State executive committee showdown Jolly, Roger W. Scott of Dillon County and Harper Welborn of Anderson County, refused to participate in the vote, one member of the dissenting group said.

State Senator Edgar A. Brown of Barnwell County, Frank Barnwell of Florence County, and Dr. W. A. Strickland of Oconee County fought to postpone the vote, but it could not be learned how many of these would sign the call for national headquarters recognition of a "regular" State party.

Jolly and other dissenters contended the executive committee was the agent of the State Democratic convention and as such had no authority to name Dixiecrat electors. Jolly moved that the committee also name a slate of Truman-Barkley elector candidates, but his motion was ruled out of order.

One dissenter, who asked not to be identified, told The Post: "One thing is certain. There will be a South Carolina slate of Truman-Barkley electors on the ballot in November. The voters at least will have a chance to choose."

Guild Reaffirms 'Hands Off' in Buchanan Firing

The Washington Newspaper Guild has reaffirmed a previous stand that it will not fight the firing of Thomas Buchanan by the Evening Star because of his membership in the Communist Party.

In a second referendum on the firing of the reporter, the membership voted 247 to 132 not to prosecute the discharge as a grievance. The tally was announced last night by Mary Jane Dempsey, member of the WNG executive board and chairman of its election committee.

By earlier referendum, the Washington local decided not to consider the firing a violation of the contract between the Star and the guild by a vote of 251 to 163.

The second referendum was called after the national convention of the American Newspaper Guild (CIO) passed a resolution urging the local to prosecute the grievance.

Virden, Attacked as Father Of Tass Employe, Quits Agency

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer yesterday "regretfully" accepted the resignation of John C. Virden, department official who came under attack in Congress last May because his daughter works for the Russian news agency Tass.

Virden, a Cleveland industrialist, recently had been director of the office of Industry Cooperation, which manages the voluntary allocation program.

Sawyer said Virden had made a "real personal sacrifice" to remain at his post so long after the war, and that Virden now feels he must return to his private business as head of an electrical manufacturing firm.

Virden first submitted his resignation last May, after Representative Fred L. Crawford (R., Mich.) had demanded that he be ousted because of his "known Red relative." He said Virden's daughter, 22-year-old Euphemia (Mickey) Virden, was employed as a teletype operator in the Washington bureau of the official Soviet news agency.

Virden replied that he "violently disagreed" with his daughter's political views and had not spoken to her since she took the Tass job.

Sawyer rebuked Crawford for airing Virden's "deep personal tragedy," and President Truman appealed to Virden to withdraw his resignation and remain at this post. Virden reluctantly consented to remain in his job.

57 Precincts Missing; Long Leads by 8202

New Orleans, Sept. 1 (AP).—Russell Long, son of the late Huey P. Long, was increasing his lead tonight over Robert Kennon for the United States Senate as returns neared completion.

Long had a lead of 8202 votes with all but 57 of the State's 1883 precincts reported. The unofficial count of yesterday's Democratic primary election gave Long 258,103; Kennon, 249,643.

Country votes, tabulated late, pushed Long ahead today. Most of the precincts still to be reported were rural.

The race was for the unexpired term of the late Senator John Overton.

Long said today he hoped to achieve a majority of 9000.

"I want to thank all my friends and supporters," he said, "especially those good old boys who laid down their cotton sacks, plows and hoes and went to the polls to elect Russell Long United States Senator. I never would have made it without a heavy country vote. But I am most thankful also for my faithful city workers who kept me from being so badly snowed under in the cities that the country vote wouldn't have elected me."

Kennon said he was "watching the returns closely" and would make no comment on the race until they were all in.

In the other senatorial race, Senator Allen J. Ellender was conceded victory by his closest opponent. Representative James Domengeaux extended "congratulations over your reelection." Returns from 1639 precincts gave Ellender, 243,155; Domengeaux, 105,570; Charles Gerth, 52,001.

Democratic nomination is equivalent to election in Louisiana.

Six incumbent Congressmen were running well ahead of their opposition. In the Third District, where Domengeaux left his seat open to run for the Senate, State Senator E. E. Willis was leading. Returns from 184 of the 215 precincts in the district gave Willis 25,706; Roy R. Theriot, 14,185, and William Thomas Shinn, 5535.

Services Plan Disloyalty Discharges

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A new, uniform system for purging disloyal personnel from the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard has been prepared at the Pentagon, it was learned last night.

It is aimed at eliminating Communists or members of other subversive organizations from military ranks and putting others whose loyalty is questioned in positions where they can do little harm.

A spokesman for Defense Secretary James Forrestal confirmed the fact that a report setting forth a new loyalty policy for all the services had been submitted by the top level Armed Forces Personnel Board.

Forrestal's office refused any further information regarding the new policy and indicated that an announcement on it may come today. Elsewhere, however, it was learned that it provides for careful screening of all military personnel and the following disposition of Communists or others of questionable loyalty:

1. In cases where there is an overt disloyalty act, the accused shall be tried by court-martial or turned over to civilian courts.

2. Where an individual is found to be "disloyal" upon an investigation by military authorities, he shall be ousted and given a 'discharge other than honorable." While the Armed Forces Personnel Board made no mention of Communists or the Communist Party, it is understood that membership in the party is to be considered sufficient evidence of disloyalty and cause for discharge.

3. Where there is suspicion of disloyalty, such as membership in Communist-front organizations, but the charge cannot be proved, the man will be assigned a "nonsensitive" job where he would have no access to military secrets or be in a position to create dissention.

Each service will set its own procedures for determining the loyalty of its personnel. However, it is believed that none plan to issue loyalty forms to draftees or recruits.

The report of the Armed Forces Personnel Board has been referred to Secretaries of Army, Navy, Air Force and Treasury for comment before going to Forrestal for approval. This action, however, appears to be mostly a formality as the board is composed of the top military personnel chiefs of the services on whom the department heads rely for advice on such matters.

Vice Admiral W. M. Fechteler, deputy chief of Naval operations for personnel, is senior member of the board. Other members include: Lieut. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Army personnel director; Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, Army adjutant general; Brig. Gen. D. C. Strother, Air Force personnel chief; Rear Admiral Thomas L. Sprague, chief of naval personnel; Rear Admiral R. T. McElligott, chief of Coast Guard personnel, and Col. M. J. Batchelder, assistant director of Marine Corps personnel.

Under the report of the board, a Communist or other soldier ousted as disloyal could be given any one of four types of discharge: (1) "general" discharge, used where a man's record does not justify an honorable discharge, but there is nothing particularly against his character; (2) discharge "without specification as to character," similar to the old Army "blue" discharge; (3) bad conduct discharge; and (4) dishonorable discharge.

Wife of District Communist Head Loses School Job

Baltimore, Sept. 1 (AP).—The wife of the head of the Communist Party of Maryland and the District of Columbia has lost her job as teacher in the Baltimore public school system.

Dr. W. H. Lemmel, superintendent of schools, disclosed this today. The school board ruled several months ago that Communists or persons with "subversive beliefs" would not be allowed to teach.

Mrs. Frankfeld said she had written a letter to Dr. Lemmel stating that:

"The American Communist Party in the United States. As an American I have a right to adhere to the principles of socialism. And as an American Communist who has proven her skill as a teacher I have the right to teach."

She was appointed a substitute teacher last September and taught a kindergarten class of handicapped children.

NLRB Ruling Curbs Workers on Strike

The National Labor Relations Board ruled unanimously yesterday that workers on strike for higher pay may not vote in collective bargaining elections if their jobs have been filled.

The replacements may vote, instead of the strikers, on which union shall represent them, the board decided in reversing a decade-old ruling.

Under the Wagner Labor Act the board first held that strikes alone were entitled to vote in "economic" strikes, then later ruled that both strikers and replacements were eligible.

Yesterday's ruling was made under the Taft-Hartley Act passed a year ago.

General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg of the CIO promptly challenged the ruling and said the CIO will fight it in court. The decision, he said, "stretches the law even beyond its stated terms."

Conditions Made Clear

If the NLRB ruling stands, Goldberg said, "strikebreakers are permitted to vote and to tip the scales in a Labor Board election against actual employes who by their ballots have demonstrated their confidence in their union and their desire to continue to be represented by it."

The board made two conditions clear: The ruling does not hold unless the jobs of the strikers have been filled by nonstrikers; and if the strike is over an unfair labor practice by the employer.

If the strike is over an employer's refusal to bargain with a union, or is over discriminatory firings, or similar issues, the ruling does not apply.

Also, if a striker has not been replaced, he still may vote under the board's previous ruling. However, the NLRB may yet alter this escape clause after a further study of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Clarification Needed

Several phases of strikes remain to be clarified. For example, the board has not ruled on the question of replacements where the strike is caused by an unfair labor practice of an employer.

Nor has it answered the question of which workers have been actually replaced during a strike, when some jobs are filled and others remain open.

Yesterday's decision was handed down in a case involving the Times Square Stores Corp., a chain of general merchandise retail stores in New York City.

Details Set Forth

Members of the United Retail and Wholesale Employes (CIO) struck for more money. Their jobs were filled, and the rival AFL Retail Clerks International Association organized the replacements.

An election was held July 2 to decide which union the workers wanted to represent them. The actual results of the election have not yet been certified. The strike is still on, the board said yesterday.

The five members of the NLRB agreed in the Times Square Corp. case that the replacements now are permanent employes and the strikers have been permanently replaced.

The CIO had raised the question that the strike actually was not over pay, but over an unfair labor practice by the employer. This was overruled.

'Axis Sally' Was Central Figure In 1928 'Lost Lover' Hoax

Camden, N. J., Sept. 1 (U.P.).—A page from "Axis Sally's" past came back to haunt her today.

A Justice Department spokesman in Washington confirmed that the woman who will be tried on a treason charge was the same Mildred E. Gillars who was the central figure in a gigantic hoax here 20 years ago.

The sexy-voiced Nazi propagandist of World War II was 18 when she walked into a Camden newspaper office October 18, 1928. She said she was "Barbara Elliott" and wanted to insert a want-ad pleading with "my husband and lover, Charles Elliott, to come back to me." She said she couldn't live without him.

Reporters jumped for what seemed a wonderful human interest story. They were told that the pretty girl and her Charles had fallen in love "the moment our eyes met." They were married, she said, and after a month of blissful married life, Charles walked out.

"A week later I discovered I was to bear his child," she said, weeping. "Charles would not have wanted the baby. I know what it is to be an unwanted child. Mine will not be born that way."

While the newspapers played up the "tragedy," Barbara" wrote a suicide note.

In it, she carefully mentioned the time she would jump off the bridge. It was to be 2 p. m.—the hour at which she first met Charles.

Police were at the bridge at 2 p. m., of course, and took her to jail for safe-keeping.

Then Charles appeared at the jail. His supposedly grief-stricken young "bride" was burned up.

"What the hell kept you so long?" she asked him.

Charles turned out to be an unemployed writer, named Ramsey.

The true story came out. Barbara Elliott was really Mildred Gillars of Portland, Me., a bit-player on Broadway. She and Ramsey were offered $75 to stage their stunt to promote a movie called "Unwanted Children."

Since neither of them had gotten their pay, the judge suspended three-months' jail sentences and ordered them out of town.

18% Rent Hike 'First of Many' Expected Under New U. S. Law

The Government yesterday boosted rent ceilings in Galesburg, Ill., by 18 per cent. It was the first such action under the 1948 rent control law.

Rent Director Tighe E. Woods said the increase—proposed by the Galesburg rent advisory board—probably was the first of many.

The area has a 1940 population of 52,250 and 5500 rental units under Federal rent control.

Woods said the 18 per cent boost covers all units but those on which tenants and landlords have agreed on voluntary rent increases and long leases and those on which boosts previously have been allowed because the landlord was in hardship.

Rent officials viewed the action as significant in that it was a clear test of regulations under which a local rent board can get an area-wide rent increase by showing that a sampling of landlords is in hardship.

Steel Shortages Idle GM Workers

Detroit, Sept. 1 (AP).—General Motors Corp. announced today an estimated 75,000 GM workers in Michigan would be laid off for several days, effective Friday, because of steel shortages.

GM said a few of its fabricating plants will remain in operation but others will be closed from Friday through Tuesday, September 7.

All plants involved are "expected" to resume operations Wednesday morning, GM said.

Atheists' Broadcast Ruling Of FCC Hit by Fr. Walsh

FCC reminded broadcasters that "freedom of religious belief necessarily carries with it freedom to disbelieve, and freedom of speech means freedom to express disbeliefs as well as beliefs . . .

"The holders of a belief should not be denied the right to answer attacks upon them or their belief solely because they are few in number."

Rosel H. Hyde, an FCC member assured the committee yesterday that any interpretation which holds the ruling to mean broadcasters would lose their licenses for refusing air time to atheists was unwarranted.

FCC General Counsel Benedict P. Cottone said the ruling was not an attempt to impose censorship but to discourage it. The fundamental proposition in the Scott case decision, he declared, was "one of insistence on freedom of speech on the air."

To grant broadcasters the privilege of permitting or excluding whatever expressions of opinion they chose, he declared, would make each broadcaster a "thought policeman."

Father Walsh's Remarks

Father Walsh, speaking more than an hour from notes, told the committee:

"The relevant fact is that the Government of the United States has unequivocally accepted the existence of a Supreme Being."

Nevertheless, he said, the FCC has accepted "by innuendo" Scott's claim that "the existence of God is a controversial subject and, hence, atheism should be admitted to the radio on parity in rebuttal of Christianity and other religions."

The FCC, he continued, had "embarked on a definitely sympathetic argument which logically should have terminated in revoking the licenses as requested." Scott had demanded that the licenses of several California stations be revoked for refusal to permit him radio time.

Constitution Discussed

There was, Father Walsh said, "no constitutional guarantee of freedom to undermine the common welfare." He added:

"It 'would be the first step toward self-immolation for a government to throw the sanction of its power and the mantle of fictitious liberalism over practices, doctrines and techniques which begin with protestations of equality but which have ended in the rise of Godless dictatorships and the brutalizing of human personality."

If the basic principles of the decision were followed, he continued, the inscription "In God We Trust" on United States coins should be replaced or balanced "by the Marxian device: 'Religion is Opium to the People.'"

Two Atheists Appear

Two atheists also appeared at yesterday's closing session of the hearings. They were Kenneth M. Whitten of Philadelphia, president of the Friendship Liberal League, Inc., and William J. McCarthy of Clifton, N. J., who described himself as "an absolute atheist."

"An atheist," said Whitten, "has precisely the same rights, no more, no less, than a bishop."

McCarthy argued that "truth should not be lined up on one side of the fence" and insisted that "religious people should not object to we free thinkers coming on and telling our side."

When McCarthy assailed the Catholic Church as the organization "that dragged the human race down into the Dark Ages," Harness stopped him and told him to stick to the legal issues in the case.

Strike Perils N. Y. Food

Local 807, said in view of the "No" vote the union members would not work because they have no contract.

There was speculation the stoppage might spread to two other large locals in the city—282 and 816—and possibly to eight others in the metropolitan area. If so, a total of 40,000 men would be involved.

Union sources said the walkout already was stopping all movement of general cargo in and out of the city.

Union officials said business had fallen off sharply at piers and rail and truck freight terminals.

It seemed likely one of the first items to be seriously affected would be cardboard milk containers. Small milk firms told the health department they had only enough to last through tomorrow. Larger companies said they had enough containers for a few days.

O'Dwyer announced after his meeting with both sides that he had been assured perishable foods, medicines and building materials would be delivered.

However, milk containers will not be delivered tomorrow.

The A&P food chain said it had been unable to deliver, 25,000 loaves of fresh bread from its bakery to its stores because of the walkout. The A. & P. said it would make no more bread until it was able to deliver it to its outlets.

The mayor said there was no emergency in the supply of newsprint because publishers had reserves ranging from nine days to three weeks on hand.

A rail embargo was imposed in the 1946 tieup. At that time 2000 chain store food outlets were closed the 20,000 tons of food moved daily into the city were reduced sharply, sugar refineries were closed, cigarettes were rationed by retailers, and the huge garment industry was hampered severely.

Markets Commissioner Eugene G. Schulz said today there is an ample supply of food in the city and no immediate cause for concern.

Holland Tunnel Picketed

The Pennsylvania Railroad said it was continuing to move perishables into the city because merchants were picking them up in their own vehicles.

Members of Local 807 picketed outside the New York end of the Holland Tunnel and had considerable success in persuading New Jersey truck drivers to take their loads back to starting points, the Port of New York Authority said.

In Philadelphia, tons of merchandise scheduled to be sent here were held up because of the walkout.

Wage rates varied greatly under the old contracts which expired last night. The top scale was $1.78½ an hour for drivers of trailer trucks. Most of the drivers—operators of five-ton vehicles—received $1.57¼. The work-week is 40 hours.

Maritime Poll Delay May Postpone Strike

The National Labor Relations Board reported to the Justice Department yesterday it could not complete its poll of 11,000 West Coast maritime workers on the high seas before October 1.

The action possibly may force postponement of a Pacific Coast maritime strike threatened for today.

A court order obtained by the Government under the Taft-Hartley Act has prevented a strike for 80 days. The order expires tomorrow.

The Justice Department is required to ask the court to end this injunction, issued last June 15 when the strike originally was threatened on the Pacific Coast.

The NLRB, however, must certify the results of an election among the workers on the last contract offer before the Justice Department acts to end the strike ban.

The NLRB also reported that Harry Bridges' boycott of the NLRB election among 26,965 eligible members of the Longshoremen's Union has been completely successful. The vote is required in the emergency strike-delaying procedure of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Meanwhile the railroads prepared to clamp an embargo on virtually all freight destined for shipment from West Coast ports if the work stoppage develops there today.

Ship Europeans 10 Pounds Lard, CARE Suggests

A 10-pound lard package is being offered by Care for shipment to European families to meet one of their greatest single needs.

This was announced yesterday by Mrs. Beatrice Schalet, director of the Washington Care office, who said Care is withdrawing its cotton package since the European supply is steadily improving.

The new lard parcel is being offered at $5.50, with delivery guaranteed in Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Great Britain, Hungary, Italy, The Netherlands, Poland and the American, British and French zones of Germany.

Germans Override Constitution Block

Bonn, Germany, Sept. 1 (AP).—West German delegates today quickly smashed a Communist attempt to prevent them from drawing up a constitution for their first postwar government.

They emphasized their opposition to the Communists by voting to seat five Berlin city government representatives as observers at a parliamentary council called to draft a constitution for the American, British and French occupation zones.

The council voted to have each political party submit its proposals for a constitution to committees that will try to correlate them before another public meeting to be held here September 7.

In general, the Germans plan a Federal system similar to that of the United States, with the door left open for the Soviet occupation zone to join later.

The meeting was hardly 30 minutes old before Max Reimann, a veteran Communist from the Ruhr, caused an uproar with a demand that it be dissolved. He was shouted down with cries of "Throw him out!" and "We are not in the eastern zone!"

The motion to dissolve was defeated 63 to 2. By the same vote the council passed the motion to admit the Berliners, who marched into the hall amid cheers.

United Europe Constitution Call Proposed

By Stephen White

Interlaken, Switzerland, Sept. 1 (NYHT).—The draft of a resolution calling upon the governments of free Europe to convene a constitutional convention for a European federation was submitted today to the European Parliamentary Union by its steering committee.

The congress, which met in full session today, is made up of members of parliaments of 13 European countries west of the iron curtain. It is an unofficial body without formal governmental sanction in any of the countries represented.

The resolution called upon the 16 nations associated with the Marshall Plan, and western Germany to appoint delegates to such a convention to be held in Paris before the end of March, 1949.

Greetings from America were brought to the conference by William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to Moscow and Paris, who spoke as vice president of the American Committee for a Free and United Europe.

"It is the belief in the United States today," he said, "that unless Europe can be unified in the near future as our own country is, the peoples of Europe will all be united as slaves under totalitarian tyranny."

A message from Winston Churchill, of which much was expected, proved to be a telegram which expressed Churchill's warm support of the principle of European federation but laid more stress on governmental steps already being taken than on the contribution of this unofficial congress.

Pope Discounts World 'Peace,' Urges Prayer

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Sept. 1 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII today told 535 American pilgrims that there is no "stable and genuine peace" in the world today. He appealed to them to pray for the United Nations General Assembly.

In a 14-minute speech, the Roman Catholic Pontiff told the pilgrims that it is "not true" that the world is at peace.

"The tragic fact is that millions of human beings who were caught in the maelstrom of the war which was declared finished more than three years ago are still . . . living in conditions which are inhuman," the Pope said.

"War still rages in more than one section of the world, while other millions must suffer under unwanted tyranny," he added.

He expressed gratitude to the United States for its "charity . . . to the war-stricken countries of the world," and said that "God will reward each and every one of those whose smallest contribution made the total possible."

Referring to the U. N. Assembly, which meets this month in Paris, the Pope said:

"Shortly the Assembly of the U. N. will resume its sessions, duly authorized to grapple with the problems of the world peace and security . . . if ever an assembly of men, gathered at a critical crossroad in history, needed help and prayer it is this body of the United Nations."

He expressed hope that the pilgrims would be joined in prayer for the U. N. by "all Catholics in every country on the face of the earth . . . (and) all men of good will."

He gave a special apostolic blessing to the Americans, who came to Vatican City to petition for the canonization of Pope Pius X.

thing," Mitchum said. "My career, my home, my marriage. My wife was on her way here for a big fat reconciliation. She'll turn the car around and head back East. My career's washed up for good."

"We Shoulda Got a Hamburger"

Dorothy Spence Mitchum, formerly of Camden, Del., was expected here Friday. Mitchum said they separated two months ago because of his marijuana parties.

Mitchum talked philosophically to reporters and police. He punctuated every sentence with: "I'm ruined!"

"I left the house last night to get something to eat," he said. "I decided to stop by Lila's place. It's the second time I've been there. I just sat down, and boom.

"We shouda got a hamburger and gone home."

If convicted, he faces a sentence of from 90 days to 10 years. Police said there could be no probation.

The Misses Leeds and Evans were gay. Miss Evans, who didn't want to be photographed, finally hid her face and pulled up her skirt.

"This is ridiculous," she said. "I think marijuana should be made illegal."

The two women rented the house three weeks ago and neighbors complained there's been a continuous party in it ever since.

Last Saturday, one disturbed male neighbor said, 100 people came and went.

RKO Studios said they would still release Mitchum's next picture next month. They didn't know what would happen to a picture he was scheduled to start in November.

Mitchum, who rode the rails to get to Hollywood, found himself a top star three years ago after "The Story of GI Joe." The bobby-soxers discovered him after "The Locket" and "Crossfire," and squealed and screamed whenever he appeared.

[Mitchum was born in Rising Sun, Md., according to the Associated Press.]

Secret China Airplane Pact Favors Soviet

Nanking, Sept. 1 (AP).—China has secretly barred all foreign planes except Russian from far northwest Sinkiang Province in what some quarters interpret as appeasement of Moscow, it was disclosed today.

The first victim of the unpublicized ban was United States Minister Lewis Clark. His embassy plane was grounded in July by the Defense Ministry while en route with supplies to the United States Consulate at Tihwa, capital of Sinkiang Province which borders Siberia.

The order appeared to be an extension of the 1939 air treaty between Russia and China. This gave Russia a monopoly on foreign flights to Hami, 150 miles from Sinkiang's eastern border.

Foreign Office sources confirmed that the order barred all foreign planes from flights west of Lanchow. The order was believed taken under instructions from "highest authority" (presumably Chiang Kai-shek.)

Previously American planes had been permitted to fly to Sinkiang. It was learned that after each such flight the Russians filed bitter protests, saying the planes were spying and photographing areas in the Russian sphere.

Deadline Set For Holy Land Withdrawals

Haifa, Israel, Sept. 1 (AP).—The chief of staff for the United Nations mediator said today if Jewish and Arab forces fail to withdraw from the Red Cross neutral zone in Jerusalem by Thursday he will report it to the Security Council as a serious truce violation.

Commanders of Israel, Trans-Jordan and Egyptian troops were scheduled to meet Thursday to set a time and method for the withdrawals.

Israeli sources said Arab Legion forces attacked Jewish positions in the Deir Abu Tor vicinity and on Mount Zion, south of the Old City in Jerusalem, but were repulsed.

Snyder Names Hoffman for Bank Parleys

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder last night named ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman a member of the United States delegation to attend the third annual meetings of the World Bank and World Monetary Fund here September 27.

Snyder, in his capacity as United States governor of the boards of the 47-nation institutions, also named to the delegation the ranking Democratic and Republican members of the House and Senate Banking Committees, Senators Tobey (R., N. H.) and Wagner (D., N. Y.) and Representatives Wolcott (R., Mich.) and Spence (D., Ky.).

They, Hoffman and other officials are to serve as advisers to Snyder and to William L. Clayton and Frank A. Southard, alternates to Snyder on the boards of governors.

Meanwhile, E. F. Dunstan, director of marketing of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, said in his return from a trip to Europe:

"The bank has been interested for some months in the possibility of the sale of securities in Europe and these possibilities have been explored from time to time in various countries. During my visit in Europe there were some discussions along this line and some encouragement was received. It is not reasonable to make any announcement at this time because there are no specific programs sufficiently advanced to warrant such announcement."

Head of U.S. Union Defends His Record

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 1—The AFL's American Federation of Government Employes went into a closed session here this afternoon to hear charges and counter-charges that have threatened to split the union.

No decisive or test vote was taken. However, it was generally agreed that former President James B. Burns made an able and effective defense of the charges made against him by several vice presidents. Burns is running for reelection. His principal opponents are James G. Yaden of Washington and Joseph Dunn of Kentucky.

In executive session, it was learned, a dozen charges drafted by six of the vice presidents were read against Burns who was given time to answer each of them. The vice presidents, incidentally, forced Burns to resign as president in May.

The nearly 400 delegates who had expected to hear sensations and scandal involving their union were sadly disappointed. The charges were petty and picayune. Among them were:

That Burns had not answered letters promptly; that he had failed to hire organizers, and that he had failed to fire a headquarters employe after he had been directed to do so by the vice presidents.

Election Scheduled Today

The election of officers will take place Thursday. The real showdown will be then. Late tonight a group of delegates was searching for a candidate who could unite the union.

Earlier the convention ordered its executive committee to make a study and to report to Congress no later than January 1 on what action should be taken to restrict preference to veterans. Several delegates opposed the present practice whereby long-time career workers are sometimes fired in reductions of force before veterans with a year or so of service.

On retirement, the AFL union approved a program which proposed optional retirement on full pensions after 20 years of service for employes in hazardous occupations, and after 25 years for all other employes, and optional retirement after 20 years on a reduced pension for those employes who are either fired or demoted in a reduction of force. Other resolutions approved urged:

An increase in the travel allowance from $6 to $10 a day; the elimination of multiple State income taxation on Government worker incomes; exemption of the first $1500 in a retirement annuity from Federal and State income taxes; that all employes who are ordered to work beyond 40 hours in any one week be paid full time-and-a-half, and that Federal workers be covered under the unemployment compensation system.

Cost of Living Wage Urged

On salaries, the convention urged that all employes be paid a wage that would offset living costs; that per diem employes be given automatic promotions, and that the Government raise salaries in the higher brackets in order to attract and to retain competent administrators, scientific, and technical personnel.

A telegram from AFL President William Green which urged the delegates to work for the repeal of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act and to vote against members of Congress who supported it was read to the convention.

In her report, Secretary-Treasurer Bernice B. Heffner revealed that the union membership had at last taken a turn upward. Gains of 1524 and 1391 members were reported for June and July, respectively. Total active membership was put at 32,327 which is considerably less than it was two years ago.

The union is barely holding its own financially. The Heffner report revealed that about $3000 is in the treasury. It urged an increase in dues because of inflated operating costs and to provide better service to the members by the publication of a better union newspaper, the creation of a department of research and statistics to review and report on all measures affecting Federal workers, and to increase the organizing staff.

Fairfax Board Revokes Trailer Camp Permit

The Fairfax County (Va.) Board of Supervisors yesterday revoked Peter E. Dorser's permit to operate the Gum Spring Trailer Camp after his tenants had complained of gross mismanagement.

A few minutes later, Dorser was fined $50 and costs in the county Trial Justice Court for having more trailers at the camp than his permit allowed. The camp is on Route 1, 3 miles south of Alexandria.

A delegation of nine people living at the camp told the supervisors Dorser wouldn't remove garbage, removed the two washing machines from the laundry room without cause and scarcely ever put in an appearance at the camp except to collect money.

Dorser said he didn't know about the hearing before the supervisors. He said he had put $1400 into the park in the last few months and would do all he could to correct any deficiencies. He added, however, that he wanted to use the area to sell new trailers and was closing up the camp as families moved out.

The camp has been without electricity or water since last Thursday, when the county electrical inspector ordered the power cut off. Inspector Frank Sagendorf said improper wiring had forced him to this step after repeated warnings had failed to make Dorser act. The water was automatically cut off when the electric pump stopped.

County Health Officer Dr. H. C. Bradford said Dorser told him Monday that he had hired an electrician to run a wire in to the pump to prevent a health menace. The water was still off this morning, residents said.

The supervisors did not stipulate a date when all trailers must be removed.

CORRECTION

The Washington Post erroneously reported yesterday that Bert Andrews of the New York Herald Tribune received the 1948 Raymond Clapper award for his news stories on the government loyalty program.

The 1948 Clapper award was given Nat S. Finney, correspondent for the Cowles newspapers in Minneapolis and Des Moines, for his Washington reporting. Andrews received the Sigma Delta Chi award, Pulitzer prize, and Heywood Broun award for the loyalty stories, and honorable mention for the 1948 Clapper award. Previously he had received the 1946 Clapper award.

The Washington Post regrets the error.

Soldiers' Home Policeman Dies

Paul C. Mix, 64-year-old special police officer at the United States Soldier's Home, collapsed yesterday and died 10 minutes after he was struck in the face by a resident during a seizure.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, ordered the autopsy today after a visit to Soldier's Home yesterday afternoon. He said he wanted to determine whether Mix died of heart failure.

As reconstructed by members of the police homicide squad, the incident happened at about 12:35, when Edwin H. Anderson, 71, became ill while eating lunch in the home mess hall.

Anderson was helped from the hall by Mix, when police said he became violent, and struck Mix in the face.

Mix then apparently became ill himself, let go of Anderson, and started to walk away. He went about 70 feet and fell. He was pronounced dead 10 minutes later by a doctor from the Soldier's Home Hospital.

When police reached the scene, they said they were unable to find Anderson for about an hour. When he was located, he said he had been walking through the grounds trying to relax.

Anderson is now under a doctor's care in the home hospital. He was not taken into custody by police. He has been in poor health for the past 10 years.

Boy and Girl, Both 6, Bring Polio Total in Area to 111

Greater Washington's polio total reached 111 yesterday, with two new cases reported by Health officials.

The new polio cases were those of a 6-year-old girl who lives in the 400 block of I 'st. se. who was admitted to Gallinger Hospital August 21, and a 6-year-old boy from Kensington, Md., admitted to Children's Hospital Tuesday.

At the same time, health officials said that an 18-year-old boy admitted Tuesday to Gallinger Hospital with polio, and first listed as a District resident, is now being listed on the official records as a resident of Chevy Chase, Md.

Of the 111 area cases this year, 58 were those of District residents, and 53 nonresidents. The total at the time last year was six District residents and 12 nonresidents.

Peak Seen Reached In Polio Outbreak

Polio cases climbed slightly last week, but the Public Health Service said yesterday the peak of the 1948 infantile paralysis outbreak has been reached and cases should level off from now on.

New cases reported for the week ended August 28 totalled 1411, compared with 1312 for the week ended August 21 and 1409 for the week of August 14.

Total United States cases reported for the year up to August 28 now have reached 11,155, compared with 10,654 up to the same date in 1946 (the last bad polio year) and 5239 for a similar period in a 5-year average.

The worst polio year on record was in 1916 when about 30,000 cases were reported. The final total in 1946 was 25,698 cases.

Christy clung to a piece of the pilot house of his boat after it was swamped while carrying slag from Crisfield, Md., to Baltimore. The S.S. DRUG—From Page 1 cultures infected with the virus. Virus growth was halted abruptly. Thus it became apparent that the drug was acting on the issue cell itself rather than on the virus.

New Drug Halts Polio in Mice

No drug heretofore, investigators pointed out, ever penetrated the susceptible cells which are the focal point of destruction by the viruses.

Some 12,000 mice were used in the testings begun on them in September, 1947.

The strain of virus selected for use in the study was a mouse virus isolated in 1940 at Columbia by Dr. Sanders and Dr. Claus W. Jungeblut. It was isolated from mice freshly infected from the virus of monkeys which had been infected and had incubated the virus of human polio, according to Dr. Sanders.

Of these experiments, Dr. Sander declared:

"Darvisul is effective against even large doses (as many as 100 lethal doses) of a mouse poliomyelitis virus when the drug is injected into the mouse 24 hours after the virus is introduced." (In mice, the virus is generally "unusually active" within two hours of injection, specialists agree).

All mice in control groups not receiving the drug failed to survive a much smaller dose of the virus, he stated.

Mice were also tested to learn the preventive value of the drug, Dr. Sanders reported. Those receiving a single dose of darvisul by mouth were resistant to a subsequent virus infection which killed all of the control animals, he reported.

Development of Drug

Darvisul, known formally as penosulfazole, was developed as the result of a vast program begun by Dr. Yellapragrada SubbaRow, director of research at the Lederle Laboratories, American Cyanamid Co. He pursued it until his death, on August 10.

As a first step, a team of workers at the company's Calco division, in Bound Brook, N. J., synthesized numerous compounds under the direction of Mrs. M. E. Hultquist and Robert Parker. The synthesized compounds were then sent to the Lederle Laboratories at Pearl River, N. Y., where under the direction of Fritz Popken and Miss Kathleen Richards they were tested for antiviral activity. Some showed promise, including darvisul.

These were then sent to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, of Columbia University, where Dr. Sanders and his assistant, Mrs. R. C. Alexander, tested them against the viruses which affected the nervous system. Results of their testings now appear in the fall issue of the Texas Reports on Biology and Medicine.

This report, and its possible misinterpretations by the lay press, led to last night's announcement, the first authorized statement made by the university or any faculty member on the new antiviral drug.

Darvisul was described as a white powder which goes into solution only with difficulty. When it was noted that the powder was not sufficiently absorbed by the body in early experiments on the mice, a sodium salt of the drug was made. This, said members of the research group, proved nontoxic, readily soluble and generally satisfactory as an injection material.

For immunization of healthy mice against subsequent attempts to infect them with polio virus, the drug was fed orally.

The mouse phase of the research project was aided by a grant to Columbia by United States Public Health Service. Assistance for the present test on macasus rhesus monkeys infected intracerebrally with a human strain of poliomyelitis) came from a Lederle Laboratories grant.

Dr. Sander's Statement

Dr. Sander's complete statement issued on release of the information on darvisul follows:

"Statements regarding the use of darvisul in human cases of poliomyelitis have appeared and are appearing in various lay publications.

"Since the responsibility for initiation and development of poliomyelitis research has been in the hands of workers at Columbia University, and since we have at no time authorized a statement on the subject, it is desired to clarify this matter.

"Poliomyelitis is a disease with tremendous clinical variability. To investigate properly the therapeutic value of a substance in poliomyelitis requires a test involving hundreds of cases of the disease studied in the most critical fashion.

"Such a study is only possible in the hands of experts working through established medical channels set up for just such purposes. Up to now it has not been possible to set this machinery in motion, and at the present writing we do not know what effect darvisual has on human poliomyelitis.

"In my opinion, public statements on this subject, whether they be of a negative or positive nature, can only do harm.

"If the use of this drug which has shown promise of considerable antiviral activity in the laboratory is decried, it might conceivably contribute to a great public disservice since we do not know the potentialities of darvisul in human disease. On the other hand, premature claims for a "polio cure" are not only unjustified, but are, under present circumstances, cruel. It must be remembered that we are emerging from a vicious poliomyelitis season.

"There are hundreds of families throughout the United States which have suffered terrible losses through death or paralysis of one or more of their members. The sole purpose of this statement is to assure these people that they have not been victims of professional neglect.

"Furthermore, in my opinion, since press reports have made it clear that darvisul has been used in humans, the victims of poliomyelitis are entitled to know why they did not receive the medication.

Preliminary Study Initiated

"A preliminary study in humans has been initiated involving the cooperative efforts of teams of workers at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University; the Medical Branch of the University of Texas; the Knickerbocker Hospital, New York City; Jeff Davis Hospital, Houston, Tex., and the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Wake Forest College, N. C.

"The only thing the group can hope to accomplish this year is to study the pharmacology of darvisul in humans and to determine if possible whether the drug warrants continued study. It is hoped that a combined report will be forthcoming from the whole group in the near future. Until all facts have been analyzed it is impossible to make any statement which can be considered objective and valid.

"One thing is clear. The real job lies ahead of us and no one can foresee the answer."

Plastic 'Armor Plates' Cloth

Transformation of cloth or disposable tissues into materials of armor plate resistance by painting them with a wartime plastic was described, and demonstrated, here yesterday before the American Chemical Society.

The plastic-coated cloth or fiber, pliable only while hardening, can be molded into lightweight automobile bodies, airplane fuselages, boat hulls (particularly for the speedy hit-and-run PT craft), noiseless gears, furniture "and other types of construction limited only by man's imagination."

In dramatic demonstration, testers of the product arranged a television show in which Washington Police Lieut. Sheldon R. McKee, in charge of the police force's pistol range, fired his .38 caliber pistol at a small shield prepared at the scene. The shield, as its makers said, not only have stopped the bullet, it flattened it.

For the demonstration, the new material, masslinn, was used. Masslinn is marketed more commonly as such things as disposable towels, babies' diapers, dental napkins and draperies.

Described by Dr. Seymour

Properties of the polyester-type plastic similar to another which was used during the war to make bullet-proof padding for uniforms were described in a paper read before the society's 114th national meeting here by Dr. Raymond B. Seymour of New Brunswick, N. J.

Dr. Seymour, director of special products research for the Johnson and Johnson Co., New Brunswick, was aided in the research and preparation of the report by Dr. Milton Gallagher and Harold H. Goslen, of the University of Chattanooga's Industrial Research Institute. It was read before the society's division on paint, varnish and plastics, at the Mayflower Hotel.

Yesterday's report consisted mainly of results of a long series of tests financed by the Office of Naval Research. The liquid plastic, of a consistency like molasses, is poured over cloth or fiber and spread out like a jelly. Alternate layers of plastic and cloth are applied until a sandwich of the desired consistency is formed.

Subjected to moderate pressure and immersed in hot water, it hardens in a few minutes, Dr. Seymour said. Plastic laminates already used commercially require long molding times and high temperatures, and are weak by comparison to the new plastic, he said.

Fortisan, made from cellulose acetate fibers, when combined with the plastic produced a product with the highest tensile strength (up to 45,000 pounds per square inch), reported Dr. Seymour.

"The best tensil strength obtained for laminates made from glass fabrics were slightly under 40,000 pounds per square inch," he declared. "This is actually 50 per cent less than that of structural steel, but since steel weighs four times as much as plastic laminate, the latter is actually twice as strong on a weight basis."

Members of the same division of the society also heard Saul Moses of the Naval Research Laboratory here, describe use of a new machine to test in one second the wearing qualities of synthetic paints and varnishes. The machine uses high frequency sound waves to crack or peel the coating tested.

Assembled chemists and chemical engineers also heard reports on the development of a form of streptomycin which germs can't resist; a warning that American farmers are starving crop lands in their race for high yields without replenishing the soil with well-rounded diets of fertilizers; an announcement that the hypospray for painless, blast-like injections will be marketed some time next year, and a report on the special advantages of procaine penicillin "G" for painless injections of the wonder drug.

Dr. Walter A. Winsten of Food Research Laboratories, Long Island, N. Y., told a division of biological chemistry meeting of the development of derivatives of streptomycin eliminating streptomycin's principal thereapeutic defect, the fact that some germs somehow seem to be able to build up resistance to it. Such derivatives, he said, have proved themselves in the laboratories; it is now up to the doctors to put them through clinical tests.

Warning To Farmers

George H. Serviss, of the Soil Building Division of the Cooperative G. L. F. Exchange, Inc., Ithaca, N. Y., sounded the note of warning to farmers.

Farmers, said Serviss, apparently feel they are doing right by the soil by piling on great quantities of fertilizers rich in nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, and disregarding new crops' needs for manganese, copper, boron and zinc.

Mechanical improvement of the hypospray to a point where it should be ready for the market in 1949 was reported to a division on industrial and engineering chemistry by Dr. James M. McKibbin and Robert P. Scherer, of the R. P. Scherer Corp., Detroit. The gun-pressure type injector literally blasts injections into the body, and has been haled as a boon to diabetics taking insulin injecting daily.

Crystalline procaine penicillin "G," synthesized for the first time a few months ago, already has risen as an accepted therapeutic agent of the medical profession, according to R. R. Umbdenstock of Charles Pfizer Co., Inc., of Brooklyn, N. Y. Its advantage over original forms of penicillin, he said, is to obviate the need of multiple "shots" of the drug since it maintains effectiveness for periods of at least 24 hours in 93 per cent of the patients treated.

Appearances Hide Realities Of Italian Life

(This is the fifth in a series of articles by a Post reporter who recently returned from western Europe.)

Post Reporter

Italy is the most striking example in all Europe of the contrast between bright appearances and the dark realities behind them.

It is easy to be hopeful about Italy on the basis of appearances alone. The Italians have pitched into the work of reconstruction with a cheerful energy that would put many northern Europeans to shame.

They have won back their self-respect in spite of their defeat in the war. They have checked communism's most dangerous bid for power in the West, and though communism is still a threat it is not gaining ground. After 20 years of dictatorship, the Italians are fairly bursting with democratic political vitality.

One of the most cheering sights in Europe is the gesticulating crowd that gathers every day on a street corner facing the Milan Cathedral. The arguments in the crowd are so loud, the gestures so angry, that an onlooker who did not know the Italians might imagine an incipient riot. There is almost always some pushing and shoving in the crowd, especially when a Communist tries to shout his case to a knot of non-Communists surrounding him.

Simply Talking Politics

But these Milanese are simply talking politics. Their argumentation is the Latin version of the soap-box meetings in Hyde Park in London. Their daily forum is one of many living proofs that democracy has caught hold in Italy after a long night of repression.

With all the encouraging signs, however, Italy is caught in the toils of a problem beyond her immediate capacity to solve, even with the help of Marshall dollars and political support from the United States. This is the over-population that shadows every phase of the Italian future.

Every year the population grows by more than 400,000, chiefly in the impoverished south of the peninsula. While all the rest of Europe is short of labor, overcrowded Italy has 2,300,000 unemployed in a country of 45 million. Most Italian factories, in consequence, are crammed with unnecessary labor; and this, in turn, helps to push up the costs of production and prevents Italy from selling more goods abroad.

In the old days the answer to Italian over-population was emigration. Today the overseas outlets are closed. There is some hope embodied in one proposal of the European recovery program, that Italians might find work elsewhere in Europe, where manpower is urgently needed.

But Italians will tell you that this is no dependable solution. The first postwar experiments of sending Italian manpower to France and Switzerland were failures, because the emigrants streamed back across the Alps to their old homes as soon as they had enough money for the fare.

Overseas Emigration Needed

The only transplantation that will stick is inter-continental emigration so far from home that the Italian will have to adapt himself permanently to new surroundings. Yet no realist in Italy sees any prospect of overseas emigration on a mass scale.

Apart from the conscious limitation of families, which is out of the question in Catholic Italy, the only hopes appear to be long-range efforts in at least three directions.

One is to set up a Nation-wide system of technical and vocational schools so that, in time, young Italians of the future can quaify for jobs in industry or for emigration to overseas countries that may need and want carefully selected skilled labor.

Another is to start reclaiming the parched or swampy land of the south as a forerunner to land reform, and to persuade Italian farmers to grow marketable crops in place of the grapes and other "marginal" crops that cover too much of Italian acreage today.

And the third, springing from the first two, is a determined effort to raise the Italian standard of living as an indirect way of meeting the population problem. For it has been demonstrated in northern Italy that the size of families declines as living standards improve.

Some of the bloom has worn off the De Gasperi government because of the feeling, even among its friends, that it is not moving fast enough to tackle these long-term problems.

As governments go in Europe today, De Gasperi's is probably as honest, as well-intentioned and as courageous as any. It is risking public discontent and Communist exploitation of discontent to improve Italy's budgetary position, thus carrying out one of the pledges contained in the ERP agreement with the United States.

The government has, for example, raised the price of wheat by 75 per cent, thereby raising the cost of bread to the consumer but saving a 350-million-dollar bread subsidy. It has raised the price of coal by 50 per cent, again saving a big subsidy; it has doubled internal postage rates, and has begun to cut down the swollen force of government officials.

Other Needed Reforms

But it has not acted with corresponding speed or decision to overhaul its tax system, to cut down on luxury spending and to get rid of the inequalities that gave the Communists their greatest talking point last spring. The contrast between the luxury in the great cities and the poverty in the farming villages is as shameful as ever.

The 1,900,000 dwelling rooms destroyed in the war have not yet been replaced, except in the rural areas. The country needs at least two million new rooms to reach a housing standard of two persons per room. The government's plan of building 1,300,000 new rooms over the next seven years is utterly inadequate to meet the problem.

As for technical schools, nothing has been done except an experimental expenditure, amounting to about $1,800,000, out of the lira funds set side as an offset to American interim aid last winter and spring.

The far bigger lira funds to be set aside under the Marshall Plan, amounting to almost a billion dollars a year, can, and probably will, be used for long-range productive purposes.

If the United States Government approves, these lira will be used for (1) housing, (2) the expansion of hydroelectric power, (3) land reclamation and soil conservation, (4) refitting ships and trains and modernizing hotels to attract tourist revenue, and (5) developing natural resources, chiefly oil and gas. Drilling for oil is now going on in Sicily and the Po Valley, and there is a good prospect, according to informed officials, of finding oil which can end Italy's dependence on coal.

But in the last analysis Italy's long-range problems are not the kind that can be solved by congressional appropriations or by the use of lira funds. They call for long-range planning and effort by the Italian government and people themselves. There can be no real hopefulness about Italy's future until the long-range social problems are tackled with greater speed and courage than now.

(Another article in the series will appear tomorrow.)

Progress Report: K Street 'L' Takes Shape . . .

AS THE PILOTS SEE IT—Steel work on the K st. elevated highway project (running at a right angle to Key Bridge) is virtually complete. Work has begun on connecting the steel framework with the K st. bridge over Rock Creek Parkway. ERP Nations to Buy Grain In U. S. From Private Dealers

Paul G. Hoffman, foreign aid administrator, said yesterday most foreign nations after November 30 will buy their grain directly from private United States suppliers.

The Agriculture Department, which has handled all such buying since Hoffman opened shop in April, will continue making purchases for Austria, Greece, China, Trieste and the United States-British occupation zone of Germany after that date.

The decision follows a congressional directive that the administrator, wherever possible, shall use private trade channels in getting aid to foreign nations

The administrator also is studying United States policy on German reparations to determine whether it conflicts with the aid program. He has a mandate from Congress to find out if the continued dismantling of factories and removal of goods from Germany would interfere with European recovery.

Secretary of State Marshall told his news conference that Hoffman has asked the State Department to seek the cooperation of Britain and France in the reparations review. No replies have been received thus far and negotiations are continuing, Marshall said.

ECA announced another $33,875,395 in foreign aid spending has been authorized, bringing the total to date to $1,363,444,481.

Largest single item on the new list was 10 million dollars for the United Kingdom to finance the purchase of cheese in this country. China was allotted $7,999,999 for oil, aviation gasoline and other petroleum products, while bizonal Germany received a $7,002,000 authorization for leather goods and for ocean freight.

Other authorizations were France, $5,314,002; Norway, $2,753,152; Denmark, $547,146; Austria, $238,760, and Italy, $20,336.

Meanwhile President Truman reported yesterday that Communist activities throughout the world interfered with American relief aid to Greece and China during the first three months of the year.

The State Department said in a separate statement that interim aid and the European recovery program had helped receiving nations more than had been expected.

Aleman Hits Back at Critics, Defends Cabinet, Policies

Mexico City, Sept. 1 (U.P.).—President Miguel Aleman defended his government's domestic and foreign policy in a 25,000-word state of the nation report before a joint session of the Mexican Congress today.

In spite of government critics, he made no mention of any cabinet changes. He said critics had failed to back up charges of inefficiency or profiteering by any members of his administration.

His report on the motives behind devaluation of the peso July 22 and the government's program to combat the high cost of living and Mexico's unfavorable trade balance highlighted the message broadcast throughout the nation.

He revealed plans to create a special organization—with cabinet rank—to control prices of necessities and to protect the consumer.

He also said a luxury tax will be proposed to this session of Congress. Import tariffs on raw or semielaborated materials as well as machinery and equipment not produced in Mexico will be revised downward. Coinage of silver money will be continued to the maximum capacity of the mint. The national railways will be reorganized "immediately" so they can balance their expenses and income and can function without government subsidies. Price controls will continue.

He made no specific mention of exactly when the new official rate of exchange for the peso would be set. He said simply it would be done "after a period of observation."

"With the United States of America, our relations are developing on an ever-increasing cordiality based on mutual respect and reciprocal appreciation," he said.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst

Washington's magnificent and expanding highway system is to no small extent a monument to the work of one man, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, who died suddenly yesterday. As director of District highways, Captain Whitehurst planned the new bridges and street improvements that within the last decade have beautified Washington. On many of these projects he did the brainwork almost single-handed, and remained long hours at his desk. Captain Whitehurst gave himself to his work with ungrudging devotion because he loved it. He had a supreme confidence in the ability of engineering skill to solve the knottiest technical problems, a confidence carried over, no doubt, from the days when he was in charge of construction of the Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals, Ala.

Recognized in his profession as a topnotch roadbuilder, Captain Whitehurst was nonetheless at pains to be accommodating to the public, and he was admired even by those who disagreed with him. His title came from his background as an engineer officer in the Regular Army, and he always kept something of the soldier about him. Gruff in demeanor, he had an amiable side which expressed itself in keen shafts of humor, but his chief characteristic, aside from his amazing industry, was his impeccable integrity. Once he aroused comment by forbidding members of his staff to receive Christmas gifts from contractors because he thought it a bad precedent. His subordinates, however, will miss him keenly because to them he showed a rare loyalty. But the community's loss is the worst, for he had served it for 23 years with unfailing faithfulness, and it is hard to imagine a replacement up to his stature.

Berle And Acheson

It was inevitable that intra-departmental disagreements would get an airing under cloak of the spy investigation. The trouble is that differences on tactics or clashes of personality are put in a context that gives off a smell of disloyalty or worse. This is the effect of Mr. Adolf A. Berle's statement before a subcommittee of the House Committee on Un-American Activities—in the kind of secret session that is regaled to the public by the committee. As reported by Representative McDowell, there was a "pro-Russian" or "appeasement of Russia" group in the State Department in the war years to which Messrs. Alger and Donald Hiss belonged and which was headed by Mr. Dean Acheson, who was then an Assistant Secretary of State along with Mr. Berle. Mr. Berle, said Representative McDowell, belonged to the "get tough with Russia" school, and he lost out, being deposed as Assistant Secretary and transferred to Rio de Janeiro as Ambassador. It would be human if Mr. Berle retained a resentment of the opposing "school," especially of Mr. Acheson. Evidently he is aware of it, for, after describing his defeat as a "trimming," he bids the committee take his prejudices into account.

The reader is left in the dark about the exact nature of the policies in 1944 on which Messrs. Berle and Acheson split. Whatever they were, they were subsidiary, or tactical. There was only one policy in 1944, and that was to win the war, to which end both Messrs. Berle and Acheson rendered notable service. To win the war the decision already had been taken on the highest level of political and military leadership to treat the Soviet Union as an ally in every sense of that word. That was as necessary to prevent the Soviet Union from making a separate peace with Germany as to mobilize and coordinate a united strength against the common enemy. The Berle-Acheson conflict, we suspect, was at bottom the usual intra-departmental struggle for power that has not yet been resolved in the State Department between the economic and the political arm. In preparing for peace Mr. Berle made a signal contribution in laying the foundation for a strong regional agreement in the Americas. There were many persons at the time, in and out of the State Department, who would have gambled upon the United Nations for global security. Mr. Berle was not one of them, and, since the hemisphere was not in Mr. Acheson's field, we doubt whether he had much to say in the dispute between the globalists and the regionalists.

If Mr. Acheson was procooperationist in 1944, he was, of course, expressing his loyalty to America and to his job. In one way or another every American in 1944 was procooperationist. The disillusionment began between Yalta and Potsdam in 1945, when, as Professor Osusky said a short time ago in this newspaper, the Politburo decided to turn the Soviet's back on cooperation and embark on conflict. It so happens that as Undersecretary of State Mr. Acheson was the first official to indulge in sharp language about Russia's conduct. In testimony before a Senate Committee he warned that Soviet Russia was "expanding and aggressive." These seem tame words nowadays to apply to Soviet Russia, but then, February 17, 1947, Mr. Acheson was freely charged with being indiscreet and undiplomatic. The Kremlin itself was incensed, and made a protest to the State Department.

Mr. Acheson, unperturbed, was not content with verbal rebuke. He it was who masterminded the Truman Doctrine to prevent Soviet expansion into the Aegean, and later paved the way for its corollary, the Marshall Plan, for filling the vacuum of power in western Europe. Both protagonists, men of the keenest intellect, have records to be proud of, and the American people (who, by the way, will soon begin to wonder why, in the light of the suspicion-sowing, we won the war at all) were well served by the contributions of both.

Admitting Refugees

There seems merit in the State Department's contention that the heartbreaking delay in starting the authorized flow of displaced persons to the United States is attributable not to the callousness of consular officials but the tortuosity of the Displaced Persons Act adopted by the Eightieth Congress. We said of this measure at the time of its enactment that it seemed "more an act of exclusion than of liberation for Europe's refugees." Certainly it has delayed the relief which it promised and which has been so long awaited. Not only have no displaced persons received visas since adoption of the act but under its terms the admission of displaced persons through operation of the President's executive order has been completely terminated.

The Displaced Persons Commission established by the act is still in the process of organization and has yet to complete its regulations governing procedure. The act requires it to select DPs in accordance with an elaborate system of priorities and to grant them visas only after determining that they have complied with an almost impossible set of conditions. These barriers to speedy migration as well as the measure's rank discrimination on religious grounds demand immediate attention from the next Congress when it convenes in January. Only after their elimination can the promise of the act be genuinely fulfilled.

In the meantime, there is hope for the DPs in the State Department's announcement on Tuesday that Ugo Carusi, chairman of the Displaced Persons Commission, will fly to Germany next week and meet there with military and consular officials in order to set in motion "thorough, speedy and efficient" administration of the Displaced Persons Act. Mr. Carusi's sympathy for the DPs and his familiarity with the problems of immigration are too well established to admit of any doubt as to the zeal and effectiveness with which he will endeavor to make the inadequate law operate. We hope he will be able to command genuine cooperation from the consular authorities abroad even if this entails on their part extra work, inconvenience and some slashing of routine procedures. The plight of the DPs is too desperate to permit any slackness or apathy in giving them succor.

Andrei A. Zhdanov

The usual question as to whether the 52-year-old Andrei A. Zhdanov has been bumped off has been asked on the heels of the report of his death in Moscow. But the medical report rings true. Zhdanov was a hulk of a man, with a high blood pressure, and for months it has been known that, unlike his 13 fellow moguls of the Politburo, he had had to quit drinking and stay on a diet. Far from wanting to get rid of him, the Politburo, we should imagine, has suffered a pretty heavy loss, for Zhdanov had an influential hand in most of the party's affairs. In some circles he was regarded as Stalin's heir-apparent, either because he was the generalissimo's own choice or because he was the only man who could have compromised the old and new Bolsheviks in the Politburo.

The feeling that Zhdanov may have been liquidated arises from two circumstances. One is that as head of the Cominform he is said to have trenched upon the field of foreign affairs monopolized by Viacheslav Molotov. Molotov is the senior, brooks no invasion of his jurisdiction, and entertains great, and doubtless justified, expectations of the successorship to Stalin. The other circumstance is that Zhdanov, in spite of the high favor he enjoyed, was responsible for the blundering over Tito. In general, bulls of excommunication are issued when the victim is well out of harm's way. Zhdanov seems to have made no such preparation when as head of the Cominform he excommunicated Tito. Indeed, a considerable loss of face has been experienced by Moscow as a result of the fact that so far Tito has been able to get away with his nose-thumbing at the Cominform. The effect on the Soviet hold on satellite Europe may be serious. Doubtless Molotov has been able to capitalize upon the imprudence of Zhdanov.

Zhdanov, indeed, has made more than his quota of mistakes since he was raised to the pedestal of bigwigs on the assassination of Kirov, Stalin's beloved friend, and the head of the party committee in Leningrad. There is reason to think that the 1939-40 war on Finland was his inspiration. As boss of Leningrad he had a defense phobia, and insisted that Soviet Russia's safety from attack depended upon making the Gulf of Finland a Russian lake. He overruled the military who had a healthier respect than the commissars for Finnish resistance, and Stalin took Zhdanov's counsel. Zhdanov imagined that as soon as the Russians crossed the border, the Finns would cave in. But Finland met the onslaught with a united front which astonished the Russians along with the rest of the world. During the war with Germany, Zhdanov, who had a higher military rank than any member of the Politburo except Stalin and Voroshilov, was in charge of the defense of Leningrad, but failed to evacuate the city, and so condemned nearly a million and a half Russians to death. There is said to have been some rumbling of dissatisfaction with Zhdanov on that account. Nevertheless Zhdanov after the war was posted to take charge of the control commission in Finland, where he sought to set up a "model administration." Certainly the Finns were treated with kid gloves, but the policy, if it were expected to seduce freedom-loving Finland, has failed.

A man who could risk making mistakes and could survive them must have had the inside track with Stalin. That he undoubtedly had. More than anybody else save Stalin himself he made the mind of Stalin, rather than any Marxist or Lenin text, the yardstick of thought as well as action in the Soviet Union and its satellites. He had intellectual leanings, and brought Shostakovitch to book for ideological deviation in his musical writings. He was an adventurist, a man of immense drive, and had more independence than most of his colleagues. With these qualities, coupled with his skill as a speaker and his implacable hatred of the capitalist world, he was the ideal man to mobilize opposition to the Marshall Plan. This he did through his resurrection of the Comintern in its new form as the Cominform. No man, of course, is indispensable in the Soviet system, and even the most talented are expendable, but there is no man in the Politburo with Zhdanov's manifold abilities and attributes.

Another Centralia?

It is indeed shocking that only a year and a half after the much-publicized Centralia coal mine tragedy, less than half the violations of the Federal mine safety code cited during fiscal 1948 were corrected. The Federal Bureau of Mines reports that only about one third of the 27,313 violations uncovered by Federal coal mine inspectors were eliminated completely, and that "progress was made" in meeting another 15 per cent. Governors of 19 States were warned in April of disaster hazards existing in 929 coal mines.

It would be unreasonable to expect that all hazards could be wiped out overnight without temporarily displacing a good many miners. Some conditions are less dangerous than others and can be improved gradually without closing down mines. Nor is the whole coal mining industry to blame; some conscientious effort has been made by a number of companies to live up to safety standards.

Nevertheless, mining remains a depressed industry, and remedial measures have a long way to go to meet the needs. At the outset Bureau of Mines figures are a severe indictment of a return to indifference as usual. The principal barrier to obtaining better compliance with the Federal mine safety code is the fact that this code has no teeth in it. Federal inspectors may bring dangerous conditions to the attention of company representatives and State mine officials, and that is all. In a few States, such as Pennsylvania, mine inspection is a serious business conducted by qualified personnel. In others, such as Illinois, where the Centralia disaster might have been expected to make a few heads tumble, the department of mines is ridden with political hacks who too often are out to please the companies in return for aid to campaign war chests.

Short of Federal penalties for uncorrected hazards, the only prospect of a general betterment is through publicity. Those recalcitrant operators who refuse to make amends must be exposed mercilessly. This is a job for the United Mine Workers and its chief, John L. Lewis. In the Centralia affair, at least, the union was too preoccupied with other matters to heed the complaints of its members before the disaster, and thus incurred the suspicion that the UMW was more interested in exploiting the tragedy for its own interests than in protecting the lives of its cardholders. Mr. Lewis can avoid further suspicion along this line by acting when the hazards are first uncovered. As long as more than half the violations apparently remain ignored, he will have a legitimate campaign which will have considerable support among the general public.

Tito's New Popularity

Marshal Tito is reported to be reaping domestic dividends from the Cominform's war of words and intrigue against him. For the first time he appears to be winning support among the great body of Yugoslavs who hate tyranny and dictatorship. It is not that they love Tito more but that they love Moscow less. Ruthless though he may be, Tito is at least a native product. If there must be a choice betwen the two, his dictatorship appears to a great majority of the Yugoslav people to be less obnoxious than subserviency of their government to the Kremlin.

The popular reactions reported from Belgrade seem to have a profound significance in the world-wide contest between liberty and communism. They emphasize a critical weakness in the idea of a great Soviet state radiating light and the principles of a unified foreign policy out to satellites dependent upon it. When differences of national interest arise, as they are certain to do, leaders in the satellite states are necessarily under great pressure to strengthen themselves at home by sponsoring the side of the argument that is popular with their own people. To be sure, that course invites assassination but even the threat of assassination is sometimes a lesser danger than the loss of standing among one's own people. Apparently democracy is not alone in being vulnerable to the forces of disintegration.

"Oak Hill"

Your August 29 editorial, "Oak Hill" is an agreeable change from the cruel, vindictive and unfair articles which have been appearing in the Washington newspapers during the past two weeks.

It's surprising that the State of Virginia, so rightly proud of her glorious past and of her famous natives, has not been interested in preserving for all time the old home of President Monroe, the beautiful house and garden and the valuable Triassic fossils.

We have been regaled with descriptions of Mr. Frank Littleton's personal appearance, his age, the fact that his clothes are torn, new, etc., ad nauseum. Apparently no one has been impressed by that fact that it is because of Mr. Littleton's steadfast determination that Oak Hill must belong to the Nation that he has refused many dazzling offers, including the one made some years ago by Mr. Andrew Mellon ($700,000).

The mansion at Oak Hill is not in its former exquisite order. Its owner has lived there in discomfort, and has been written up as something rather disgraceful. But to those of us whose forebears had a share in settling this country it is a matter of pride to find that there are still men willing to sacrifice their personal happiness for an ideal.

NEIGHBOR.

Leesburg, Va.

Your reporters in describing the trouble at the former home of President James Monroe near Leesburg several times said he lived there "after he was President." That is an error. Monroe lived there in 1834 when he was President and it was there he framed the Monroe Doctrine and while he lived there that he promulgated it.

J. A. TRUESDELL.

Bluemont, Va.

It is sad, indeed, to see these handsome historical residences go "on the block"—and particularly so when we realize what makes it compulsory for an owner to have to part with such a valuable and beloved possession. In our present economy it is practically impossible, even for the extremely wealthy, to maintain such a vast estate—wages and taxes soon turn such an enterprise into a serious liability for the owner.

I agree with you, I cannot understand why the State of Virginia does not take steps to acquire Oak Hill as a historical shrine. A small admission charge would help defray the cost and maintenance.

Sadly enough, many of these fine historical residences are falling into the possession of the Catholic Church whereby they become tax free property and the State loses all revenues that might be earned from private possession of the property. I think it would be wise for our Government—either State or Federal—to preserve these large land grants and magnificent mansions as public shrines rather than let them fall, tax free, into the possession of any group.

Segregated Playgrounds

Last Saturday a group of young people, white and Negro, attempted to exercise their inalienable right to the pursuit of happiness by playing together on a Washington playground and swimming together in a Washington pool, both run by the Recreation Board of the District of Columbia. They were prevented from exercising their rights as citizens by officials of the Police Department of the District of Columbia.

Though it is true that the Board of Recreation has seen fit to declare certain playgrounds and recreation areas in this city "white" and "Negro," there is no regulation or law which states that Negroes cannot play on a "white playground," or that white people cannot play on a "Negro playground."

The Progressive Party of the District of Columbia joins with the Young Progressives in declaring that we will fight this matter through to the Supreme Court, if necessary, to establish the fact that the rights granted to us under the Constitution of the United States make no provision for second-class citizenship for the Negro people. The scores of Negro children who stood around the outside of Rosedale playground on Saturday afternoon carrying their bathing suits and inflated inner tubes with which they hoped to play in the swimming pool, on the hottest day of the year in Washington, received a sad lesson concerning their status in the Nation's Capital.

It is our contention that the ruling of the Recreation Board that certain playgrounds are to be "white" and others "Negro" is unconstitutional. It is further contended that the police officials who prevented these young people from entering the playground and pool, had no legal basis for their action and were therefore perverting the powers of their office by protecting those who were breaking the law—the Recreation Board.

"American Diplomacy"

Your editorial of August 30, "American Diplomacy," was an assault on Mr. George Wadsworth which is not fair. To insinuate that Mr. Wadsworth is not fit for the job in Turkey is simply misleading the public.

Mr. Wadsworth was for several years a professor at the American University in Beirut. He also was Minister to Syria and to Lebanon. He witnessed the development of the area, and undoubtedly has an intelligent comprehension of the Near East. He was appointed Ambassador to Iraq, where he won the respect of all the population and has regained prestige for the United States.

His appointment to Turkey is very appropriate. It seems to me from the trend of the editorial that the mere fact that George Wadsworth is popular with the peoples of the Near East makes him unfit. Does that mean that the fitness of Foreign Service officers sent to the Near East is directly proportional to their pro-Arabism?

It happens that the Middle East is mostly populated with Arabs. To understand their case, desires and aspirations is not working against the interests of the United States. George Wadsworth has served to better the relations between the Arabs and the United States.

In your excellent editorials on the procedure of the Un-American Activities Committee, your main criticism was the spoiling of the reputation of several individuals. Then you, in a different manner, destroy the reputation of an American public servant whose record is known and whose objectivity cannot be challenged. CLOVIS F. McSOUD.

Farm Demonstration Purpose

Several readers have written The Washington Post recently about the cost of the soil conservation demonstration held August 18 at the farm of Mrs. Nellie Thrasher near Frederick, Md. Judging from their letters, some of them seem to feel that the Federal Government spends a great deal of money on such demonstrations as this. This is not correct. First of all, it should be understood that the demonstration at the Thrasher farm was not organized, sponsored or paid for by any Government agency—Federal or State. The same is true of all such demonstrations, of which a considerable number have been held throughout the United States in the last year or so.

The Soil Conservation Service contribution to the one-day event on the Thrasher farm was just the same as our contribution would be in applying a conservation farm plan to any farm under normal circumstances: Our technicians made a survey of the farm, prepared a farm plan for Mrs. Thrasher, and later gave technical supervision in the application of that plan.

The principal difference between the Thrasher job and the other jobs, in which our technicians have helped apply complete farm plans to more than 70 million acres of farmland to date, is one of time. Most conservation farmers apply the practices themselves or pay to have it done, often over a period of five years.

It was possible for the same job to be done on Mrs. Thrasher's farm in one day simply because hundreds of her neighbors and public-spirited individuals, business firms and organizations contributed cash, materials, services and facilities, the loan of equipment, and personal labor to get the job done. Such things as the new barn, and the new paint and insulation for the house were the gifts of Mrs. Thrasher's friends and fellow citizens in Frederick County.

Agencies of the United States Department of Agriculture contributed exactly what they contribute in helping any farmer do a better job on his land—technical counsel. These agencies were the Soil Conservation Service and the Extension Service.

Such demonstrations are not an attempt to create the impression that the United States Government doles out assistance to farmers in this way. Representatives from the State Department and from the embassies and legations attended the demonstration because soil and water conservation is a matter of the utmost urgency to every nation of the world and, in fact, to world peace itself. These men were there simply to learn everything they could.

Miss Poston's letter published August 27 stated that a farmer "would have to mortgage his farm to raise the funds for such extensive improvements." It is true that some farmers have borrowed money to apply conservation plans to their farm without making loans or without mortgaging their land.

This is possible partly because of soil conservation districts, which are both local subdivisions of government and farmer-cooperatives. Many of these districts own their own equipment so that they can help their farmer-cooperators apply conservation measures at a minimum cost.

And in practically every instance that we know about, no matter whether farmers have done the work themselves or borrowed the money to do it, their total production and their incomes have increased as the result of applying conservation farming methods to their land. That these methods are effective and that their application through the democratic machinery of soil conservation districts is highly satisfactory to the farmers is evidenced by the fact that the Soil Conservation Service now has more requests for farm plans than it has personnel to take care of them.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Warren's Power

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—It would be hard to find a more typical Western family than the Earl Warrens. They have been spending the summer in a cabin near here with access to the mountains and the beach.

Both parents and young overflow with vitality. Not only the five Warren children but their friends and dates are constantly in and out of the simple cabin with its rustic furniture.

Young Bobby is pumping the ancient player-piano on the second-story gallery that gives onto the bedrooms. In the kitchen, Earl, jr., 13, is cutting up one of the big tuna fish he caught on an early-morning deep-sea fishing trip with his father. The two younger girls are dashing out for a beach picnic.

Bobby, who at 13 is a crack shot, reminds his father that they are to leave at 5:30 in the morning for two days of hunting. The Governor, who has been making speeches and shaking voters' hands, looks remarkably fresh.

All this is political capital of the first order. It is one of the reasons for Warren's pulling power in the West.

But beneath the charm and the attractiveness Earl Warren is a shrewd politician with a practical and realistic knowledge of the conflicts and the demands of the Nation and, particularly, of his region—the great new empire of the West.

He knows that water is essential if the present phenomenal growth is to have permanency. And this brings him up against one of the sharpest issues in this State; an issue that many have accused Warren of ducking.

THAT IS the limitation in the Bureau of Reclamation Act providing that no individual may get water from the Government for more than 160 acres of his land or 320 acres held by a man and wife. The issue arises in California's Central Valley where large corporate landowners insist that the limitation cannot be made to apply to them, since they held the land before the proposed reclamation project.

The Bank of America, with its 516 branches extending from one end of California to the other, has offered powerful opposition to the 160-acre limit. So has Senator Sheridan Downey, Democrat, who is crusading against practically everyone in the Nation's Capital for enforcing the law.

When Warren talks about water, he begins with the large view. What is needed, as he sees it, is a water grid that would serve in the same way as a power grid to distribute every drop of available water as equitably as possible in all areas where water is needed.

In the Central Valley he sees the need for a compromise. Like others, he questions the sacredness of the 160-acre figure. Warren inclines to the view that there should be no arbitrary limit that could penalize individual farmers owning and operating their own land.

DEFENDERS of the present limitation believe that any compromise will break down all restrictions and lead to the huge factory farm being conveniently supplied with water at the taxpayer's expense. But Warren has unquestionably resisted great pressure to join the Downey crusade.

His views on public power are more clear-cut. He believes that the Government must not only build dams but must distribute the power to communities if the people are to get the benefit of this great natural resource.

Moreover, he is very familiar with the forces attempting to block this program, including certain key men in the Republican Party in Congress. It is part of his shrewdness to see exactly the play of these forces.

At the same time, however, he is cautious and patient. How nearly and how directly he will strike out for what he believes is anyone's guess.

One thing is certain. Warren never will be happy merely to preside over the Senate as an umpire calling balls and strikes.

He is too practical, too pragmatic, too Californian for that. Legislation is being considered to give him statutory authority over the independent commissions and bureaus in Washington so that they can be integrated in the larger picture of Government within a separate Government department. That is one of the proposed outlets being considered even at this early stage for the energy of the Westerner who casts a long shadow in this election year.

Cooperative Apartments

When owners of apartment houses, many of which are very old, wish to reap a golden harvest, they employ high-pressure salesmen to sell "perpetual leases" at extravagant figures. They are aware that the tenants have no place to go in a city packed with people, and so they apply the "squeeze." Elderly men and women who have paid their rent promptly for perhaps decades are threatened with eviction.

Naturally nothing is said by the "pressure groups" concerning the manifold disadvantages that may accrue from buying a so-called perpetual home. Tenants have rights which should be respected.

It is heartening to know that Tom Dewey, often referred to as the "racket buster," will give this cooperative apartment selling which is spreading its tentacles all over the country careful scrutiny if he is elected.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

For A European Doctrine

LITTLE MORE was to be expected at this time than the tentative and precarious arrangement about Berlin which may now have been arrived at. For in the larger conflict between East and West there is a stalemate. Neither side is prepared to decide the issue by war. Neither side is compelled to surrender on the vital issues. They are too irreconcilably divided to settle the issues by agreement.

LIPPMANN

In the diplomatic negotiations of this summer both sides have recognized the existence of this stalemate. Both have realized that they need to prolong the stalemate and that all that they could agree on was that this was not the time for the showdown. The conflict will, of course, continue. But the diplomats have probably succeeded in avoiding the showdown, for which no one was ready, and in holding the conflict just below the level of open and uncontrollable violence.

THERE MAY, therefore, be a pause. That at least is the optimistic view, and if it is correct, there may be time to prepare and improve our position before the next crisis develops. I venture to believe that we can do that if we grasp the opportunity, which is still open to us, to define clearly and concretely a doctrine addressed to all the nations and states of Europe on the expansion of the Russian Soviet empire.

The doctrine would call not for the containment of Russia by America in the center of Europe but for the retirement of Russia from Europe and the restoration of Europe to the Europeans.

There are, I know, difficulties and objections which have inhibited us from taking this position. I have been made well aware of them, having discussed this thesis in print for a year, and privately with many responsible public men on both sides of the Atlantic and on both sides of the iron curtain. But if the reader will bear with me, I should like to sum up what seem to me the compelling advantages of our declaring, explicitly and in measured language, that the paramount objective of our European policy is to end the occupation of Europe by non-European powers and to restore to the European nations the control of the destiny of Europe.

I HOLD that such a declaration would clarify the real issue of the conflict, and would in the course of time exercise an influence on events not unlike that of the Monroe Doctrine a century and a quarter ago. The Monroe Doctrine declared our intention to end the expansion of alien empire over the two American continents. We ought now to declare our intention to use our influence to bring to an end the unnatural and intolerable expansion of alien empire over the continent of Europe.

I have little doubt that our influence would mount if we made this, rather than containment, our declared objective in Europe. For then we should be identified with the liberation of Europe, with the pride, honor, and hopes of the Europeans, and not—as I think we are today—with the idea that the European continent is an expendible object in the struggle between Russia and America, and not with the idea that the Europeans who value freedom must take sides with us as the lesser of two unpleasant evils offered to them.

THIS IS not the first time that the Russians have moved westward into Europe. Russian armies were on the Rhine in 1735 and in 1747. They looted Berlin in 1760. In 1814 they were in Paris. Russian armies have occupied Romania 10 different times in two centuries. A hundred and 50 years ago the Russians had a foothold in Malta in the center of the Mediterranean. Peter the Great very nearly established the Russian power in the Adriatic. The Russians have occupied Poland and Hungary not once but several times.

But always Europe resisted them. Always in the end the Russians were compelled to retire. I submit that in this respect, if we have the vision and the courage, history can be made to repeat itself—most of progressive Europe, including much of Europe now under Russian domination, is resisting this pressure of alien non-European power now intruding upon the European community. In the end, if we put our influence and resources behind the national forces in Europe and behind their common consciousness of Europe, it will become increasingly difficult for the Russians to stay. In the end they will again be compelled to retire.

IF WE are candid with ourselves, I think we cannot have much confidence that the masses of the people of Europe will accept our own ideology as the only road to their salvation. Not even in western Europe, not even in Great Britain, are we able to prove that the political and social order, which is best for us, would be best for them. It seems to me, therefore, that we are complicating matters unnecessarily by allowing it to appear that Europeans must choose between communism and Americanism.

Our position in Europe would be sounder and stronger if we made ourselves plainly and simply the champions of European independence, if we made it unmistakably clear that our paramount objective was to liberate the continent from the domination of non-European, and therefore, alien powers.

WE ARE an anti-Communist power. We are also an anti-Socialist power. We can rally part but not all of Europe to anticommunism. We can rally much less of Europe to anti-socialism. But we can rally most of Europe, including Communists in many lands, to the simple and elemental thesis that the Russians should go back to Russia and leave Europe to govern itself. This surely is the crux of the quarrel between Tito and Moscow—even to Communists in Yugoslavia prolonged domination by Russia has become unbearable. There can be little doubt, I think, that if Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary were strategically as independent of Russia as is Yugoslavia, they would soon manifest an even greater spirit of national independence.

If we made ourselves the champions of a policy of evacuation and withdrawal from Europe, we should, I believe, enlist the emotions which are stronger than the Communist ideology—the spirit of nationalism, the tradition of a thousand years that Europe is distinct from Russia, and the deep, universal, human hatred of armies of occupation and their agents.

THE DECLARATION of such an American doctrine about Europe would not, of course, be a substitute for the constructive elements of our present European policy—that is to say, the recovery program, European union, the guaranties against military aggression, and the program of rearmament to keep in being a powerful striking force. The doctrine I am arguing for would fuse and would animate all these projects. They now tend to bog down because they are complicated and technical, because they raise hopes of recovery and security which are neutralized by the fear that Europe is doomed to be divided between Russia and America and to become the Armageddon of a world war.

All our plans and hopes of European union encounter the elementary fact that Europe cannot unite before it has recovered its independence. A divided Europe, one half to be dominated by the Russians, the other half supported and protected by the United States, is not a Europe which is likely to find the moral force to construct a new European order.

We should dissociate ourselves entirely from the idea that we are in Europe to perpetuate this situation. We should identify ourselves with the realization that Europe will first have to be united in a struggle for the independence of Europe.

Only in that struggle is the vision of European unity likely to become real and concrete, and to evoke the new energies which a new order requires.

Wallace Declines to Address Segregated Alabama Meetings

was made by J. P. Mooney, campaign director for the Progressive Party in Alabama.

His announcement, read from the courthouse steps from penciled notes, brought a mixture of jeers, boos, laughs and finally a barrage of raw eggs.

"We had hoped to present you to the greatest living American," Mooney said, and the boos and cat calls began.

He explained that Wallace would not participate in any gathering that violated the Constitution of the United States.

"We believe in free speech and free assembly without police interference," Money continued.

The eggs began to fly at this point. One struck a spectator, and another bounced off a reporter's head. Mooney himself wasn't touched.

They knew in advance that Wallace would not address a gathering where the races were kept apart.

The shock-haired Iowan, presidential nominee of the Progressive Party, circled the courthouse, and then drove on up to Bessemer. There he canceled another talk when police would not allow Negroes to enter the park, set aside for whites. He later made a radio speech here in which he accused the big steel corporations of dominating politics in Birmingham and Gadsden.

Wallace first adopted his strategy of silence today when he reached Gadsden, after a comparatively enjoyable trip up through the cotton lands from Decatur.

Arriving in Gadsden, he found that the police had arranged ropes on the courthouse steps, with "White" and "Colored" signs to keep the races apart.

Stays in Automobile

The candidate refused even to get out of his automobile. After an announcement was made over a loud speaker that segregation was a fundamental violation of civil rights, he drove on to Birmingham, birthplace of the States' Right (Dixiecrat) party.

In his radio talk here tonight, Wallace called attention to the "courteous" receptions accorded him earlier in Decatur, Huntsville and Guntersville. He added:

"But when we reached Gadsden and Birmingham, cities that are dominated by Northern steel trusts, we could not hold meetings because the police insisted on dividing free Americans by the colors of their skins."

He said that Republic Steel and United States Steel's Tennessee Coal and Iron subsidiary have political machines that dominate both cities.

"It is also interesting," Wallace said, "that one of the most open incitements to violence in the South came from a national radio commentator, who is known as a spokesman for the National Manufacturers Association."

[The Associated Press said that after the meeting nine Negroes appeared at the scene bearing signs critical of Wallace.

[Words on the signs included:

["Mr. Wallace, your program has set the Negro back 50 years. We are tired of being made a political football."

["The Negro has accomplished more in the past 100 years than Russia has in the past 100 years."

["We, the colored people, want education, not agitation."

["I'd rather live in the South and know where I stand than live elsewhere and have no standing."—Editor's Note.]

Wallace was to board his special railroad car tonight at Tuscaloosa. He is scheduled to speak tomorrow morning in Jackson, Miss.

The earlier phase of Wallace's motor journey today was comparatively pleasant.

To turn a joke Wallace got off in one town, the Alabama Dixiecrats didn't egg him on as they had in North Carolina. The only time that eggs were thrown was in Albertville. These came from the sidewalk as the caravan was passing through, and were far off the target.

Wallace left his special railroad car this morning at Decatur, Ala., to take to the stump. He started out here with a speech in front of the courthouse.

Only a few Negroes were noted in the crowd of 500, and Wallace lieutenants suggested that they probably were afraid to come out.

"I have not come to the South to preach disunity," Wallace said. "I've come to the South to preach a pulling together."

He said that the average income in Alabama was only half what it was in New York.

"It's not up to me to give you advice," he said, "but as a citizen of the United States I don't like that. I want to see the average income in Alabama doubled . . . The Progressive Party wants to get the South acting as a unit, with white and black working together."

There was a scattering of applause and a few boos. However, most of those in the audience just stood there, staring at the man who started out as a Republican, turned Democrat, served as Vice President and in the Roosevelt and Truman Cabinets, and now heads up a party that is backed, among others, by the Nation's Communists.

Wallace's second stop today was Huntsville, home of Senator John Sparkman. Here he addressed another courthouse crowd, and once again Negroes were conspicuous by their absence.

Wallace became lyrical talking about Alabama's "lovely, rolling hills." He rhapsodized about TVA and raised two of Alabama's son's—Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black and Claude Pepper, now United States Senator from Florida.

He said it was time for Alabama to stand up in its own right—"black and white alike"—and increase the productivity of its human and natural resources.

"The wealth of the South," he said, "has been drained on the one hand to the sea by erosion and, on the other, to Wall Street by exploitation."

This brought some applause. There were no boos at all in Huntsville.

The next stop was Guntersville, and here the candidate ran into some tormentors. They carried a Confederate flag, and, for the most part, appeared to be between 17 and 20.

They let go with their first boo when Wallace was introduced as "the next President of the United States."

"Hey," one of them yelled, "We'll lynch him if you say the word."

It was noticed that the fellow was trembling as he said the words.

Tries to Ignore Hecklers

Wallace tried to ignore the youngsters, and told the crowd what a nice reception he got earlier in Decatur and Huntsville.

"Is it possible," he asked, "that the Dixiecrats who egged me in North Carolina don't have the same influence in Alabama?"

"What do you want, an egg?" a youth cried.

Wallace said he had no illusions about the Dixiecrats and their strength in Alabama.

"They are backward men," he said. "They want to turn the wheels of progress backward . . ."

"But not to communism," said one of the hecklers.

"Wall Street is behind the Dixiecrats," Wallace said, continuing.

"Well, it's not Joe Stalin," barked a youth wearing a red baseball cap.

Wallace went on to tell about his aspirations for Alabama.

"I want to see it excel because I'm a good American," he said, and was interrupted by laughter.

"Why don't you go North?" somebody yelled.

"Well, I'm running for President of the United States," said Wallace, grinning.

"Ha, ha," roared one of the youths. "That's the biggest joke I've heard since Bob Hope."

At least 99 per cent of those in the crowd at Guntersville were orderly. Probably very few of them agreed with Wallace, but they seemed to think that he ought to be allowed to have his say.

New Strategy In Campaign

hitting virtually all of the States Warren has just passed through.

Formal announcement of Dewey's itinerary is due in a few days.

Warren's schedule will carry him deep into the normally Democratic border States of Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma and New Mexico, another clew to the Republican plan of attack.

Missouri is the President's home territory. Republicans hope to pick up Democratic Senate seats in Oklahoma and New Mexico, and to clinch the reelection of Senator John Sherman Cooper (R.) in Kentucky.

GOP Hopeful of Kentucky

A stopover in Colorado bore out reports that the GOP sees a chance of unhorsing another reputedly "safe" Senate Democrat—Edwin C. Johnson. There's a two-way race for the Senate nomination in both parties in that State, with Warren due to speak right after the Colorado primary.

Governor Warren will make his lead-off campaign speech in Salt Lake City on September 16 and follow through with these other major speeches: Pueblo, Colo., September 17, Albuquerque, N. Mex., September 18; Tulsa, Okla., September 20; St. Louis, Mo., September 21; Louisville, Ky., September 22; Columbus, Ohio, September 23, and Detroit, Mich., September 24.

Senator Barkley meanwhile discussed his own still unannounced itinerary with the President in a White House call. He disclosed present plans call for vice presidential stumping by plane, and a possible joint appearance with the President, but said no details were finally settled.

Barkley is leaving for Italy tomorrow to attend the interparliamentary union meeting in Rome, September 6 to 12. He said he will return to this country to start campaigning "in earnest" by October 1. Mr. Truman will make a quick Labor Day swing through Michigan, but hasn't announced further plans beyond a mid-September Western trip starter at Dexter, Iowa.

GOP to Clean Out Reds, Dewey Promises

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey said tonight the job of cleaning Communists out of Washington would get under way "as fast as a Republican President can be elected."

The GOP presidential nominee made the statement at a joint news conference with Harold E. Stassen, one of those he defeated for the nomination.

Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota, came to Albany tonight for a conference about the campaign speech he will make in Detroit next Tuesday on behalf of the Dewey-Warren ticket.

The speech will be a reply to President Truman, who will open his campaign with a major speech in Detroit on Labor Day, the day before Stassen's appearance.

When a reporter wanted to know how Stassen could map a reply now without having had a look at Mr. Truman's speech, Dewey answered:

"We know the general approach of the Democratic Party. It has been pretty well stated and is pretty thin soup."

Asked whether Stassen planned to discuss the high price issue, Dewey said, "That may come in."

Dewey made plain again that one issue of the campaign would be the congressional inquiry into Communist spy activities. President Truman has termed the inquiry a "red herring" designed to divert attention from lack of congressional action on prices.

Dewey and Stassen were joined for their conference at the executive mansion by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), who has been spending quite a bit of time in Albany assisting with campaign planning, and by Elliot V. Bell, New York State Superintendent of Banks.

Wallace Sound Truck Driver Stoned, Slugged

Washington had its own anti-Wallace demonstration last night, but with missiles harder than eggs and tomatoes, police reported.

The driver of a sound truck, Paul E. Johnson, jr., 2130 R st. nw., told police he was stoned and slugged at Rosedale Playground, 17th and Gales sts. ne., at about 7 p. m. He said he was under contract to members of the Progressive Party of the District of Columbia to furnish the equipment.

Two unidentified women about 20 tried to speak against playground segregation before an audience of about 500, Johnson told police.

CROWD OF BIDDERS ATTENDING YESTERDAY'S 'DEAD LETTER' AUCTION AT POSTOFFICE

For five hours and eight frantic minutes yesterday, there was bedlam at the City Postoffice.

At least 500 citizens crowded into a salesroom there to bid on everything from trusses to picture frames as the City Postoffice Department held its twenty-sixth "dead" parcel sale.

Results: $5801 in cash for the department's coffers and a workout for its employes.

At day's end, one clerk said, "I'd be in my grave quick if every day was like this."

C. M. Mace, assistant superintendent of mails in charge of the inquiry and dead letter branch, was a little amazed himself at the way people bid yesterday. The department had estimated they would collect about $4000 from the sale, but when people bid up to $21 for new towels and wash cloths figured to go at $8 . . . well!

The bids ranged from $70 for a pair of sterling candlesticks down to $1 for a "lot" of trusses.

Two women bid up to $36 for a pair of sterling candlesticks, trays and fruit dish, with Mrs. Sol Farber, of 1401 F st. ne., the winning bidder. The department had figured the lot would bring $12.

On the other hand, a woman's coat which officials thought would bring about $10, went for $3. Miss Doros of 2958 2d st. se., who'd come down earlier to be sure it would fit, bought a mouton fur coat for $53 which dealers at the auction figured was worth at least $125.

One elderly Southern gentleman (unidentified), bought a lot of miscellaneous women's hats. Is he going to sell them? No sirree. He's going to North Carolina and have a big dinner for his women folks and watch their expressions when he brings out his purchases.

The department stopped admitting prospective bidders at 12:05 p. m.—five minutes after the sale started. At that time, a five-deep crowd of would-be buyers lined the hall outside the sales room. Mace estimated 500 persons were turned away. By late afternoon, the bidders had dwindled down to about 200, while the weary voices of the auctioneers droned on.

While yesterday's sale hardly set a record on receipts (largest was about $6000), it did set a record on crowds. Department officials are still puzzling over what brought all those people out.

Havana, Cuba, Sept. 1 (U.P.)—Juan Arevalos, anti-Communist labor leader, was shot and killed today by unidentified assailants who fired on him from a speeding automobile and escaped.

Arevalos, 52, had collaborated for a long time with the AFL. He was a Communist during the dictatorship of Gerardo Machado, but later became disillusioned by communism.

Only recently, he returned to New York where he was invited by the CIO to discuss Latin-American labor problems. He also conferred with AFL spokesmen in Washington.

Arevalos was born in Spain. He is survived by a son who is an attache to the Cuban Consulate General in Miami, Fla.

WHITEHURST—From 1

Mrs. Harriet W. Lankford of Washington, and Mrs. Hamilton O'Dunne of Baltimore, Md. He also leaves a granddaughter, Maria Lankford, 3.

Under Captain Whitehurst's administration the mileage of paved streets in Washington was nearly doubled. There were about 550 miles when he came to the District Building in 1926 as an Army captain assigned to be assistant District Engineer Commissioner. Now there are close to 1000 miles.

His busy career was reflected in mixed recollections by fellow employes. One recalled him as blunt, yet diplomatic. Another said his major professional trait was his aggressiveness. They recalled him as a good boss to those who get their work done. Another recalled a first impression was that he even laughed with a Southern accent. He was a native of Richmond, Va.

Major traffic improvement projects conveived under Captain Whitehurst's administration included the Scott Circle, Thomas Circle and Virginia ave. underpasses. They included the dual highway bridge project now under way, the Dupont Circle project, the S. Capitol st. bridge project, the K st. elevated highway project. Pennsylvania ave. bridge over the Anacostia, the Calvert st. bridge over Rock Creek Park, and many other works.

At his death he was running an annual business with a budget pushing the 10 million dollar mark. He had campaigned vigorously for setting up the District's highway fund as a separate budget account.

Captain Whitehurst received his engineering training at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, where he was graduated in 1906. Until World War I he worked as an engineer with private construction firms. During that war he served here and abroad as a combat engineer officer. He remained in the service, and for a time was head of the construction division at

Wilson Dam in Alabama.

While still in the Army, he was assigned to the District Engineer Commissioners' office in 1926. He resigned three years later to enter private industry, but the Commissioners, having studied a proposed streamline plan for highway management here prepared by Captain Whitehurst, decided he was the man to head the new setup. They called him back into the city government. His title was chief engineer and coordinator; later the job was expanded and Captain Whitehurst got the title of director of highways.

In the recent war, he served as head of the District Department of Civilian Defense, and commander of the city's civilian defense corps. He continued to supervise the highway department.

Captain Whitehurst was the first president of the city officials division, now municipal division, of the American Roadbuilders Association.

He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and other associations of highway officials. His official duties also included membership on the coordination committee of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the traffic coordinating committee of the Commissioners' traffic advisory committee, and chairmanship of the District wage board.

He had been a member of the Washington Board of Trade. He was a former vestryman of All Souls Memorial Episcopal Church here, and was a member at his death.

He lived at 3115 34th st. nw.

Captain Whitehurst will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m., at the All Souls Memorial Church, Cathedral ave. and Woodley pl. nw.

the political science department at Columbia University after 10 years on the faculty, and denounced the trustees as "reactionary, visionless and narrow."

Twenty-two years later, when most of the trustees with whom he had disagreed were no longer on the board, he returned to the Columbia faculty as a visiting professor.

The lean, white-haired historian was always on the fringe of politics but never ran for public office. He was an early supporter of President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

When Beard was awarded the 1948 gold medal of the National Institute of Arts and Letters last February, there was a storm of protest. Author Lewis Mumford resigned from the institute, and accused Beard of distorting history to suit his views. Mumford said he resigned in protest against Dr. Beard's isolationist stand and his writings before and during the war.

Schacht Wins Acquittal on Nazi Charge

HJALMAR SCHACHT
Out of internment

Stuttgart, Germany, Sept. 1 (AP). Hjalmar Schacht, the former wizard of German finance, won acquittal today from a German appeals court on charges he was a major Nazi offender.

It was the second time that Schacht, now 69, escaped from a prison sentence or worse on charges stemming from his association with Adolf Hitler and the Nazi regime.

The international military tribunal in Nuernberg two years ago refused to find him guilty of war crimes for which other Nazis paid either with their lives or prison terms.

Today the court held that Schacht's eight-year prison term passed by a Stuttgart denazification court was unjustified in view of Schacht's participation in the opposition movement against the Nazis from 1936 onward.

German spectators in the court room cheered and some handed flowers to Schacht, but American officials were stunned.

Charles M. Lafollette, military governor of Wuerttemberg-Baden, said "It's a German problem, but my comments would be unprintable." Charles M. Friedmann, American denazification officer, called it "incomprehensible."

Japan Is Foe Of Red Idea, Says M'Arthur

Tokyo, Sept. 1 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today on the eve of the third anniversary of the surrender of Japan that the Japanese have embraced democracy and will resist communism.

It was three years ago Thursday that MacArthur and other high Allied officials took the unconditional surrender of the Japanese aboard the battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay.

Today Japan "stands as an oasis of relative calm in a troubled and turbulent universe," the supreme commander said.

"There need be no fear concerning the future pattern of Japanese life, for the Japanese people have fully demonstrated both their will and their capacity to absorb into their own culture sound ideas, well tested in the crucible of western experience, in lieu of those concepts responsive to the myths and legends which have so handicapped their past," he said.

MacArthur said the Japanese in the three years of occupation had "done their part and, under existing circumstances, done it well."

Turning to the world situation, he said, "The council tables of the world have failed to produce a just resolution of the vital issues among nations and men, and fear grips the peoples of many lands as the specter of war still hovers over the earth."

Speed Fliers Set New Tops

Cleveland, Sept. 1 (AP).—Speed fliers ripped the big and little courses apart today to write new high marks for National Air Race qualifying runs.

Everyone appeared confident most of the 1947 race records will fall over the weekend.

Most spectacular tour of the day was Cook Cleland's 417.4 miles per hour average for two trips around the 15-mile Thompson Trophy course. It was the fastest average ever made on a race course with a propellor plane. He is flying a Goodyear F2G Corsair.

Cleland's closest competition was his other entry, which he flew to win the Thompson Cup last year.

20c U. S. Fine Frees Girl in China Court

Shanghai, Sept. 1 (AP).—Dolly Li, Chinese dance hall hostess, was sentenced today to two months imprisonment for misconduct, or a fine of $10,000 a day in China's old currency.

She offered the court 20 cents (United States) to set her free. The court had to accept it, however reluctantly. The Ministry of Justice hasn't put out a new set of fines to coincide with the new currency issue of one gold yuan to three million old dollars, or four gold yuan to $1 United States.

One on the Aisle—

Comedy at Olney An Apt Farewell

By Richard L. Coe

AS A CHARMING grace note to its season, the Olney is presenting a comedy of country life back in the days before our Republic was weaned. This is Brian Aherne's production of "The Beaux' Stratagem," George Farquhar's adventure of 1707, which took the stage from the drawing rooms of London to the countryside setting of so much eighteenth century literature.

There is much charm and literate wit in this melange of the bucolic and sophisticated. Aherne has staged it well and plays the leading role with knowing humor. More than that, the cast is immeasurably aided by Carmen Mathews.

Miss Mathews is utterly beguiling as the flirtatious, dissatisfied Mrs. Sullen, whose husband is a country lout of the most brutish ilk. She has some delicious things to say, but the point is that she says them so well. Here is a player who uses her voice in the finest style, uncorrupted by neither the harshness of inexperience nor the laziness encouraged in young players by the microphone.

Last season Miss Mathews was splendid as the arch Miss Robinson in Maurice Evans' "Man and Superman," and for the past ten years her career has ranged from Shakespeare to Irwin Shaw. She is a Philadelphia girl, but I suspect that her skill in elegant speech stems from her training at London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. All too seldom does one find our leading ladies making the most of their voices. And since Mrs. Sullen has many a witty observation, it's all the more pleasant to find Miss Mathews so happily entrusted with them.

"THE BEAUX' STRATAGEM," Richard Skinner, Redge Allen and Evelyn Freyman present Brian Aherne in the comedy by George Farquhar (1707). Staged by Aherne with settings by S. Syrjala. Special music by Alfred Reynolds. Continuing through Sunday night at the Olney Theater.

THE CAST

Bonniface	Richard Temple
Cherry	Maureen Stapleton
Aimwell	John Merivale
Archer	Brian Aherne
Dorinda	Patricia Jenkins
Mrs. Sullen	Carmen Mathews
Sullen	Ralph Sumpter
Scrub	Victor Beecroft
Gibbet	Grant Gordon
A Country Woman	Lois Alexander
Lady Bountiful	Mary Forbes
Hounslow	Allan Stapleton
Bagshot	Dan Stapleton
Sir Charles Freeman	William Putch

Slight, Leisurely Plot

Farquhar's story is slight. Two impoverished gentlemen, one traveling as servant to the other, are scouring the countryside for easy money. A wealthy marriage is in their cold calculations, but, influenced by the sentimental trend of the post-Restoration period, the author sees to it that true love joins the gentlemen with a duo of bright county ladies.

The style is more leisured than the rushing tempo of our own time, but it makes for attractive, natural summer theater fare. Aherne must be credited with a coup for having seen that this literature of the past would fit so simply into country theatergoing.

The screen star has staged the comedy's 11 scenes with the emphasis on easy-flowing simplicity, and Olney's scenic designer, S. Syrjala, has served him effectively. The supporting cast, most of whom have toured the New England theaters with the star in recent weeks, play with genial enthusiasm. Richard Temple, as the innkeeper who gave his name, Bonniface, to his latter-day prototypes, and Mary Forbes, another film face, as the equally noted Lady Bountiful, are up to their chores, as are their companions. Aherne, as the dashing servant who captures Mrs. Sullen's fancy, retains his chiseled features and skillful style.

As a finale for a summer season, the Olney couldn't have hit on a more appropriate, facile reminder of the continuing foibles of the ever-fascinating race called human.

PEGGY LEE arrives today for her week on the Capitol stage, which is good news to the collectors of her records . . . This numerous band last year made her the country's top lass with a song . . . Peggy's best-known probably is "Manana," and she'll probably be forced to toss it into her F st. repertoire . . . Husband Dave Barbour, who coauthored "Manana" with her, will be along for the local date, and if parents don't know where their offspring's wandered to this week, take a tip: the kids will probably be down listening to Peggy . . . She's purty, too.

THE THEATER GUILD, considering the labors going on for the renovation of the National Theater lobby, suggests that its members will find it easier to write or phone Bess Davis Schreiner (DIstrict 2433) than to run the hazards up to her mezzanine office.

STAGE SHOWS aren't the rule at drive-in theaters, but Sidney Lust's out at Beltsville seems to be breaking them in . . . Second of the summer's parade of live artists, Ches Davis, last night opened a three-night run with his Swanee River Barn Dance . . . The hillbilly boy has his own troupe with him, and in addition to his revue you get "King of the Wild Horses" on the screen tonight and "Grand Ole Opry" Friday night.

GRANDPA JONES' return for another Saturday night at Constitution Hall means another hillbilly note for the week's crop . . . Grandpa brought down the colonial rafters last time he was here, just as he did when Connie B. Gay opened his Saturday night series last April . . . The foot-thumping twang artist will have Ramona (not likely to be confused with Paul Whiteman's Ramona—remember her?) this week . . . Tickets at the Willard and the Clyde Moody record shops.

TEMPORARY ALLIANCE—Sultry Marlene Dietrich as a former Nazi singer in Berlin's "Lorelei Club" and John Lund as the Yank captain she attracts until Jean Arthur arrives, as an investigating Congresswoman, in "A Foreign Affair," the comedy arriving today at the Palace.

Caroline Mars At Patuxent

Patuxent, Md., Sept. 1 (U.P.).—The Caroline Mars, the world's largest flying boat, landed at the Patuxent naval air station at 7:32 p. m. (EDT) after a flight from Chicago.

The big craft will stay here until Sunday, when it will go to Cleveland for the national air races. The next morning it will leave for the West Coast.

Filter Is an Important Factor In Getting Mountain Photos

By Ollie Atkins

RESPONSE to last week's advice on making pictures at the seashore has been so enthusiastic that we decided to discuss vacation snapshots in the mountains today.

Good pictures of mountain scenery are tough to make. The panoramic view which the tourist gasps at from a lookout point is the first pitfall which fouls up the snapshooter's picture record. Even what your eye sees on a very clear day is not visible to your film. So clamp on that orange or light red filter if you even hope to cut through the ever-present blue haze in mountain scenery.

My experience has been that these views of mountains need full exposure. At this time of year there is a lot of light absorbing green in such pictures and it takes time to get this color recorded on film.

In this column we just assume that everyone uses "pan" type film. Panchromatic emulsions (meaning films sensitive to all colors including red) are the most practical for everyday photography. The use of orthochromatic emulsions is particularly suitable for outdoor pictures in the mountains where a lot of green foliage will record better on "ortho" type film.

One warning about mountain-top panoramic view is to save your film if the day is overcast. You'll never get anything worth while pictorially in the fog or rain.

Infra-red films will produce startling results with sharp negatives recording distant scenery invisible to the eye. Don't frame your pictures with green foliage in the foreground, as the infra-red emulsion records all green as white.

Whereas at the beach everyone tends to overexpose, just the opposite is true in the dimly lighted mountain trails and around that $20-per-day cute cabin you have rented. Use your meter very carefully to get correct exposure. If in doubt, give additional shutter time.

With sunshine coming through trees a mottled and uneven light reaches the ground. This is a tough problem in photography. The only answer is an exposure compromise between the sunny and shadow areas. Sometimes by backlighting (shooting into the sunlight from a shaded point) you can produce beautiful forest scenes, for the shafts of light will dramatically dress up the picture.

Pictures around mountain streams require a lot of exposure too. Make a compromise here too, so you will record the shadow detail of the trees and bushes along the bank. If your picture includes very much sky try to subdue this by letting foreground branches hang in the light area.

Very effective rural pictures can be made in the early morning when ground fog is covering or partially enshrouding the valley areas.

Her pet Parakeet perched on a twig of artificial flowers served very well as a subject for this picture by Trudy Saunders of Arlington, who made the picture with floodlights and her Speed Graphic.

ARTHUR KLIESRATH took first honors in the August black and white picture competition of the Old Dominion Camera Club. Max Osias copped second, third and fourth places in the recent contest.

What "hydra-matic" means in the modern automobile with reference to the Model "T," the Kodak "Tourist Camera" indicates in modern cameras as compared with the box Brownie. Last May Kodak announced the Kodak Tourist Camera with its F/4.5 lens and shutter speeds ranging from 1/25th to 1/100th seconds with Time and Bulb settings.

Today three new models of the Tourist Camera are announced. They are patterned after the original model, the basic differences being in the lenses and shutters. Prices vary from $46.50 to $25. The new models are styled around a cast aluminum body, removable back, Tenite top trim, built-in shutter releases and flash synchronization and enclosed eye-level viewfinder. They all are folding cameras.

My purpose in going into these cameras so completely is simply to point out that good and long-lasting home cameras are available. They are practical for mother to make snapshots of the baby with little knowledge of photographic technics. The cheapest model is nothing but a modern version of the Brownie. The best model will serve the average family for years of dependable picture-making.

Hecht Co. Nets $1.29 a Share In Six Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Hecht Co. yesterday reported net income of $1,066,532 for the six months ended July 31, equal to $1.29 a common share.

S. M. Hecht

President Samuel M. Hecht pointed out that a change in method of calculating the reserve for bad debts decreased net earnings about $100,000 for the 1948 period. If the new method had been applied to the same 1947 period, net then would have been $1,043,260 or $1.26 a common share.

Actually, the department store chain in the six months ended July 31, 1947, reported net of $1,149,395 or $1.40 a share.

In a statement to stockholders, President Hecht said that accounts receivable on July 31, 1948, were about $3,775,000 more than on the same date last year "due largely to increased volume and a greater percentage of business done on a charge basis."

He also revealed that the company on April 14 this year privately placed a seven-million-dollar loan with an insurance company. The 3⅛ per cent, 20-year loan was used to retire a 10-year five-million-dollar loan and current borrowings of $1,300,000 originally made to finance an expansion and improvement program. Balance of the seven-million loan was added to working capital.

The new branch store at Silver Spring, Md., he said, "has made a satisfactory contribution to sales and profits for the six-month period."

PEPCO ACTIVE: Potomac Electric Power common stock was in heavy demand yesterday on the Washington Stock Exchange in anticipation of its going ex-dividend today. Holders of record yesterday will receive the quarterly 22½-cent dividend per share, due to the holiday next Monday and three-day delivery rule. Exactly 4432 shares of Pepco changed hands at 13, with numerous small purchases. Attesting to local brokers' foresight in recently extending hours on the local market, 3422 shares of Pepco were traded from noon to 3 p. m.

PERSONNEL NOTES: Harry H. Steck, field manager of the American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., has been promoted to district sales manager of the southeastern division with headquarters in Washington . . . Paul S. Wooton, Washington representative of Chilton Publications, has been elected director-at-large of the National Federation of Sales Executives in charge of Government relations . . . Richard S. Reynolds, Jr., 40, of Richmond, has been elected president of Reynolds Metals Co., succeeding his father who is the new chairman of the board . . . W. Chalmers Burns, formerly president of Richfield Oil Corp., has been elected president of Hartol Petroleum Corp.

AIR PARCEL POST: Domestic air parcel post was inaugurated yesterday on scheduled airlines, providing patrons of more than 42,000 postoffices in this country with a new service. Acceptable are packages weighing more than 8 ounces and not exceeding 70 pounds and 100 inches in combined girth and length. Rates are prescribed by zones, beginning at 55 cents for the first pound in the first zone and up to 4 cents for each additional pound in the first two zones; up to 80 cents for the first pound and 65 cents for each additional pound in the eighth zone.

GAS REPORT: Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported a seasonal loss of $76,229 for July, compared with a deficit of $26,477 in the same 1947 month. The increased loss was attributed primarily to charges for amortization related to the changeover to natural gas. The month's gross of $734,237 was up $19,062, while operating expenses of $759,459 were $64,102 higher. However, net income for the first seven months this year was sharply increased by the greater use of gas for heating and the effect of full natural gas operation. Net for the period totaled $1,083,243, an increase of $417,132. Consolidated net (including subsidiaries in Maryland and Virginia) was $1,504,539 for the first seven months, an increase of $661,731 over the same 1947 period. Meters in service in the District of Columbia numbered 171,049 at the end of July, an increase of about 2000 in the past year.

FREE MEAT: Maine is offering free fresh meat. The State is being over-run by deer and rabbits in record numbers. The State game commissioner hopes hunters will take home 45,000 deer this season, 50 per cent more than last year. Come, he says, and get it.

EARNINGS: Neisner Brothers, Inc., which opened a large Washington store in July, reported net income of $556,609 in the first six months this year, equal to 84 cents a common share, compared with $575,793 or 87 cents a share in the same 1947 period. Other earnings reports:

Chandler Reportedly Plans Clean-Up in Baseball

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE FADE-OUT of Connie Mack's Athletics from the American League pennant picture bogs down what had been the top rags-to-riches baseball story of the year, but up in Pittsburgh the Pirates are writing a high adventure tale of their own.

POVICH

All of a sudden the Pittsburgh club, even more scorned than the A's as a pennant threat, have snuck up on the National League leaders and as we went to press were only three games off the top. It isn't quite rags-to-riches because the Pirates under the aegis of the Indianapolis banker, Frank McKinney, have always had the fullest creature comforts, but they were stumbling around last season as the poor little rich boys beyond their depth in the National League.

A pennant for the Pirates, which is now reckoned as not too improbable, would be a record-breaking feat and something to be hailed as the first of its kind in 48 years. No club that ever finished last ever won a pennant the subsequent season in either league, but that's the goal the Pirates are reaching for. From cellar-to-pennant would be the high distinction of the Pittsburgh team.

THE FABLED BRAVES of 1914 did race from last place in July to the pennant in September, but they were no eighth-place club the year before. The Braves had finished fifth in 1913. Manager Stallings had no such rag-tag and bobtail collection of last placers as Manager Billy Meyer of the Pirates took over this year when he was brought out of the American Association to relieve Manager Billy Herman who was a four-alarm flop with the Pirates.

Interesting enough is the fact that the club that came closest to zooming out of the cellar and winning a pennant the following year was the Nats of 1945. In '44, for the first time since Clark Griffith moved into the Capital in 1912, the Nats gravitated into the cellar. But in '45 they barely missed winning the pennant by a game and a half in finishing second to the Tigers.

Not until this week were the Pirates reckoned one of the hot clubs of the National League. Successively the acclaim has been for the Braves, who were on top most of the season; for the Giants, who once threatened to take it all with their hitting power; for the Dodgers, who have been bouncing in and out of first place under Burt Shotton, and for the always dangerous Cardinals, with their Stan Musial and Enos Slaughter. But the Pirates have been quietly winning a lot of ball games.

THE FIRST STROKE of Pittsburgh genius this season originated in the front office where Owner McKinney and General Manager Fred Hamey decided to pluck the veteran Billy Meyer out of the minors as their new manager. Herman had been lax with his ball players. Meyer was known to be a stern disciplinarian. Hamey knew him at Kansas City where they both worked for the Yankee farm club. McKinney okayed the experiment.

The pitching staff that has been winning under Meyer is something that is almost unreal. Rip Sewell who went into retirement as a coach, last Fall because he was too old, is back pitching for Meyer and doing very well. But at 40, Sewell isn't the oldest guy on the Pirates' staff. The dean is 41-year-old Fritz Ostermueller who was pitching for his cakes and not eating too well with the Red Sox, Browns and Dodgers before he was released to the Pirates as a washed-up southpaw.

Elmer Riddle quit the Reds a couple of years back because he lost his stuff. He's back with the Pirates as a winning pitcher. Kirby Higbe from the Dodgers was a flop with the Pirates as a starting pitcher. As a relief specialist, he's a tremendous asset. The Pirates' $100,000 investment in Rookie Bob Chesnes of San Francisco was an early-season absurdity. He couldn't win. He's winning now.

OTHERWISE MEYER has assembled an amazing team from a collection of Brooklyn and minor league cast-offs, excepting, of course, his two big outfielders, Ralph Kiner and Waldon Westlake, who are Pittsburgh developees and represent the club's power. Look at the lineup with which the Pirates beat the Giants the other day. It's something from the bargain basement.

The starting pitcher was Riddle, the Reds' cast-off. When he needed relief, Higbe threw two hitless innings at the Giants. At shortstop was Stan Rojek, who wasn't good enough for the Dodgers. Meyer's second baseman was Danny Murtaugh who flipped from the Phillies to Milwaukee to the Braves without gaining distinction. The first baseman was Ed Stevens, a former Dodger farmhand from Montreal. On third was the old Pirate, Frankie Gustine.

Catching for the Pirates was Ed Fitzgerald, the rookie from Sacramento. The man in right field was 38-year-old Dixie Walker. Ralph Kiner was supposed to lead the league in home run hitting again and he's doing that, but the Pirates weren't supposed to be going anywhere at all. Now look.

Record Pro Gate Predicted For 'Skin-Ram Game Tonight

Los Angeles, Sept. 1.—All professional football attendance records are expected to be broken tomorrow night when the Washington Redskins and Los Angeles Rams meet in Memorial Coliseum.

With the advance sale already past the 70,000 mark, a throng of 85,000 is expected to storm the mammoth concrete saucer for the exhibition. At last year's game, which the Rams won 20 to 7, the paid attendance was 80,910. However a week later in the same stadium the Los Angeles Dons and New York Yankees of the All-America Conference set a pro record by attracting 82,678.

Davis Will Start

With Lieut. Glen Davis making his pro debut at left half, the Rams today were quoted as one-touchdown favorites to make it three straight over the Skins in their third annual preseason charity contest. The Rams also won the '46 game, 16 to 14.

Two of the past masters of the T-formation, Sammy Baugh and Bob Waterfield, will resume their rivalry.

Baugh will be operating with a Redskin starting backfield which include Eddie Saenz and Bob Nussbaumer at halfback and Sal Rosato at fullback. Hugh (Bones) Taylor, the angular left end whom Baugh considers "the greatest receiver I've ever thrown to," and Georgia Joe Tereshinski will be at the flanks taking Baugh's bullets.

Lieutenant Davis, on leave from the Army for this one game, will be in the Rams' starting backfield along with Waterfield and two former USC Trojans, Halfback Jack Banta and Fullback Bob Hoffman.

Davis now scales 180 pounds and says he was never faster. Last week he ran 100 yards in 10.8 in full football uniform.

Five Skins are definitely out of action for this game. They are Quarterback Harry Gilmer, End Herb Shoener, Fullback Glenn Barrington and Guards Bill Dietz and Ted Andrus. All are rookies.

Arcade Divides

Betty Riding turned in a no-hit, no-run feat to pitch the Arcade-Pontiac girls' softball team to a 4-0 victory over the Pulaski Club of Baltimore and an even break in a double-header at Alexandria last night.

The Pulaskis, Maryland State champions, won the opening game, 7 to 6.

Yanks Hold Second On Berra's Homer In 12th; Bosox Romp

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—A home run by Larry (Yogi) Berra with two out in the last half of the twelfth inning gave the New York Yankees a 5-4 uphill victory against the St. Louis Browns today and enabled them to retain second place, one game back of the league-leading Boston Red Sox.

Behind most of the game, the Yankees tied the score at 4-4 in the ninth when Tommy Henrich blooped a double into short centerfield to score Cliff Mapes after two were out. Mapes, in the role of a pinch hitter, had opened the last of the ninth with a two-bagger down the left field foul line.

Rookie Bob Porterfield, third Yankee hurler, got credit for the victory, his fourth against one defeat. He took over in the tenth with two on and only one out and held the Browns scoreless the rest of the way. Fred Sanford went all the way for the Browns and took his fifth straight defeat from the Yankees. His over-all record is 9 wins and 17 defeats.

Brownell, Riegel Lose In Amateur

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 1 (AP).—Robert Brownell, of Washington, D. C., was ousted from the 1948 United States Amateur Golf championships today by Movie Actor Clarke Hardwicke, who once took 20 minutes to line up a putt.

Brownell's defeat came in the third round, 3 and 2. Not until the eighth hole did Brownell go one down—the first time he had trailed an opponent in the title chase.

He made the turn in 34 strokes, one below par, yet was one down to the delaying tactics of Hardwicke.

Brownell birdied the first two holes, each time by sinking putts of 10 feet but the movie actor got one of them back with a birdie on the third.

Both players birdied the fourth with twos. Brownell's tee shot on the 137-yard test stopped just an inch from the cup for the closest approach to a hole-in-one during the tourney.

Hardwicke got another bird on the fifth—the sixth birdie in the first five holes.

Two Go Out of Bounds

The Washington golfer showed his first effects of Hardwicke's methodical play on the sixth when he belted two out of bounds. After that the movie actor was in command although Brownell did win the thirteenth with a par four.

A chubby, sweet-swinging Southerner from Bobby Jones' hometown—Atlanta's Gene Dahlbender—brushed aside two national champions today to establish himself as the "player to beat" in the forty-eighth amateur tournament.

The blond bomber from Georgia began his day's work by eliminating Defending Titlist Robert (Skee) Riegel of Monterey Park, Calif., 3 and 1. He followed with a 3 and 2 triumph over Robert Harris of Los Gatos, Calif., the United States College king.

Field Down to Last 16

This double-barreled achievement as the field was whittled to 16 buoyed Dixie's hopes for its first native winner since Jones won his fifth amateur in 1930.

The road to the championship, however, looms as no easy one for Dahlbender or any of the other aspirants left after three full days of eliminations over the 6617-yard Memphis Country Club course.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, seeking o add the United States to the British and Canadian crowns he already holds, is still around swinging—and getting tougher with each day.

In the running also are Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., the bulldog competitor who won the crown in 1939 and 1941, and Wee Willie Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y., the polished stroker who captured the National in 1938 and the British amateur in 1947.

Two rounds tomorrow will chop

Bob Feller in Fine Form Again, Tribe Beats A's, 8-1

Philadelphia, Sept. 1 (AP).—Bob Feller turned in his second straight fine pitching performance tonight as the Cleveland Indians swept the two-game series with the Philadelphia Athletics, winning 8-1 before a crowd of 24,607.

Feller fanned nine batters while permitting only six hits.

Feller was in several tight spots, especially the fourth when Hank Majeski singled and Sam Chapman was safe on Lou Boudreau's boot. Here Feller fanned the side as Elmer Valo, Mike Guerra and Pete Suder all saw the third strike breezed past them.

Feller's nine strikeouts gives him a season total of 120. Brissie fanned six Cleveland batters as he retained the American League leadership with 124 victims.

Bums Finally Beat Schmitz, 6-0, to Increase League Lead

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers finally solved the Johnny Schmitz mystery today as they thumped the crack southpaw and the Chicago Cubs, 6-0.

Besides getting even with Schmitz, who has beaten them five times previously, the Brooks strengthened their National League lead. It also helped the Dodgers forget their double loss in Chicago yesterday.

Victor Pays $6.20 With Austin Up

Timonium, Sept. 1.—Adding further to laurels gained at Cumberland and Hagerstown earlier in the half-mile season, M. Stanfield's Fast Slave, $6.20 favorite, captured the Forrest Lore Purse today as the 10-day meeting of the Timonium Fair Association got under way.

A gathering of 5500 witnessed the card.

In order to account for his third triumph of the year Fast S'ave had to move from slightly off the pace and around his field. He got within striking distance of the leading Country Dude after having entered the home stretch, and under energetic handling by Jockey Stanley Austin, the 3-year-old drove to a 3-length triumph in 1:22 4/5 over a fast racing surface.

Country Dude saved the place by two lengths from Audible and Guinea Club was fourth.

Austin was completing a double by guiding Fast Slave. He had previously piloted D. L. High's Lalila to a surprise $37.40 payoff in the 6½ furlongs first race.e

Those who coupled Lalila in the daily double with A. August's No Quota, successful in the "about five furlongs" second number, received $136.00 for $2.00. Time for the second event was 1:02 2/5. A winning ticket was valued at $4.80.

In addition to his earlier winning mounts, Stanley Austin guided the respective winners of the seventh and eighth races, C. E. Gooch's Get Set and Mrs. H. B. Donegan's Exploration, to bring his tally to four for the day, a winning ticket on Get Set was valued at $14 while one on Exploration was worth $7.60 for $2.

Jeannette Signs With Bullets Again

Baltimore, Sept. 1 (AP).—The championship Baltimore Bullets of the Basketball Association of America announced today signing of a three-year contract with Buddy Jeanette to continue as player-coach.

At the same time the 31-year-old Jeannette disclosed he had reconsidered his thoughts of retiring as a player. Last season his "clutch" playmaking and shooting was a decisive factor in the Bullets' drive to the championship.

Jet Wins Sandlot Title Over Firemen, 3-1

Myles Holds Losers to Seven Hits

Jet Motor Sales won the sandlot championship of Washington yesterday with a 3-1 victory over the District Fire Department on the South Ellipse.

Behind the steady seven-hit pitching of righthander Bernie Myles, the Jets gained the right to represent Washington in the All-America Baseball Tournament which opens next Wednesday in Harrisburg.

The 19-year-old former Eastern High School star outpitched veteran Ben Harrell of the Firemen, who hurled his second complete game in two days. Harrell's cause wasn't helped any by the poor fielding support he received.

Jet nicked Harrell for two runs, enough to win, in the fifth on a single by Ben Browning, a walk to Myles, a single by Fred Wahler and an error. A two-base error figured in Jet's final score in the seventh. It allowed John Smerick to stretch his single into a three-bagger. Smerick scored on an infield error.

Terrapins Open Drills With Scrimmage at 7 A. M.; GW Hustles for New Coach

Yesterday was only the first day of football practice at Maryland, but some 65 Terrapin players must have thought they were already in midseason.

They were issued full battle equipment—shoulder pads, helmets and other protective gear—at 6:30 in the morning. Thirty minutes later they were blocking, tackling and bumping heads just like they'll be doing in preparation for the North Carolina game in November.

"That's just to loosen 'em up," remarked head man Jim Tatum, who has been waiting impatiently since the conclusion of spring practice to put his crop through its two-a-day fall paces.

After a two-hour morning session, the boys were permitted to loaf and take it easy—until 3:30 p. m.

Nobody said anything about him, but all eyes were on "Old 44"—Lu Gambino. He was at his usual right halfback post, but he may not be there at 3:30 this afternoon. The Southern Conference executive committee will make final decision on his eligibility today and if he's ruled out, there'll be some changes made in the Maryland attack.

Except for George Simler at right end, the line was the same as last season.

George Washington University's football team, a pushover for most of its opponents last year, will be trouble for all of them this season.

That's the impression you got, watching the Colonials run with snap and holler through their first day of practice yesterday at Frog Island, just across the oPtomac.

Chief cause for the obvious change was the presence of the new coach from Oklahoma City, John (Bo) Rowland.

Already, the boys know the little guy with the sharp eyes and booming voice means business. The established vets of last year have to hustle to make this year's club.

After 12 hours of running, light calisthenics, signal drill and chalk-talk, one of the regulars of last season panted, "that bird is tough, but I have to hand it to him, he knows his football."

Rowland employs the single wing system used by G. W. last season, but with last year's record of one win in nine games, he's overhauling the delivery of the attack.

His team lacks weight, with 220-pound Tackle Harvey Shipman the only big boy. He's moving his two fastes ends to the backfield to help speed the attack.

Dick Koester and Stan Burak, both pass-snatchers last season have been shifted to backfield spots. Charlie Butler and Hank Bartelloni, backs last season, are being tried at end positions.

Other top contenders for backfield spots include Johnny Shullenbarger and Joe Buell, who were scholastically ineligible last year, Andy Davis, McKinley Tech All-High before he served in the Army, and Bill Spangler, Al DuGoff, Joe Bernot and Frank Vavallo, lettermen last year.

Although Rowland saw part of the squad work during spring practice, he knows most of his players only as "No. 31" or "pardner." Indications are that they'll all have to scramble for regular positions right up to September 18, the opening day of G. W.'s season. The Colonels' opener is a toughie, against Wake Forest there.

He's in the Pink—Covered With Mercurochrome

Georgetown has discovered a triple-threat man in Football Center Vic Banois.

Yesterday he demonstrated three different ways of becoming injured.

He started out in the morning by tripping over a player and injuring his leg.

At noon he visited a doctor with a sore eye and had an infected cyst cut out.

Four hours later he was dressing for the afternoon workout and petted a squirrel which happened to visit the dressing room. Result: the squirrel bit him on the hand.

He was sent tto the Hoya Hospital for an anti-tetanus injection. The entire coaching staff accompanied him to make sure nothing happened to him on the way.

Wolf and Wolfe Tie at 76

Worsham Hits 80 in Junior Golf

Jay Wolf and Eugene Wolfe each scored 76s yesterday to tie for medal honors in the District Golf Association's annual junior open championship at Georgetown Prep.

Neither Jay, captain of George Washington University's team, nor Eugene, Maryland Junior Open champion from Montgomery-Blair High, were finalists last year.

Marvin (Bubby) Worsham, the Wake Forest sophomore, who won the title in 1947, scored a disappointing 80 on the par-70 course. The course was in excellent shape, but the scores were generally higher than expected. Match play starts today.

The playoff for medal in The Washington Post Schoolboy Championship tournament also took place at the Prep with Stanley Mouser defeating Willie Beach, 80-85. The two had tied for honors with 74s in The Washington Post tourney last May at Manor.

Board Vote Denies Extra Pay To Local Teachers Who Coach

As expected, the Board of Education officially voted yesterday that physical education and health teachers are required to perform coaching duties without extra compensation.

Result of a poll of the members of the board showed unanimous approval of the Personnel Committee recommendation that coaching be considered an integral part of the teachers' jobs.

Only member of the board who didn't vote was Mrs. Phillip Sidney Smith, who is in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Elise Z. Watkins, secretary, explained that the vote had to be unanimous to carry. That's the procedure on polls conducted when school isn't in session and regular meetings aren't held.

The action yesterday officially ended the coaches' strenuous fight for extra money with the threat that they would refuse to coach if they didn't get it.

Their stand was taken after Superintendent of Schools Dr. Hobart M. Corning stated that extra-curricular coaching was done on a voluntary basis.

Yesterday's action contradicted that statement. The only thing the coaches gained was a promise of time off for hours devoted to coaching.

From the outset, four of the 12 football coaches refused to join the movement in the battle for more money. Yesterday, even before the official announcement was made, only one holdout remained.

Coolidge Coach Gil Conn said he was waiting for official notification before he would start football practice. He got it quickly. Assistant Principal Miss Agatha Norby informed him of the Board's action and requested him to start football practice.

Conn said he would call the squad next Tuesday.

Falls Church Council Adds Members at First Meeting

As Second Class City Expansion From 6 to 9 Was Required; 3 Others Get Jobs

In its first formal meeting last night, the new Falls Church City Council appointed three additional councilmen and named three men to new city posts.

Orme

Falls Church became a second-class Virginia city on August 16. As a city, its council was required to expand from its former six members to nine.

Appointed from Ward 1 last night was a real estate man, John R. Eakin of 700 E. Broad st.

Samuel J. Dennis of 419 E. Columbia st., a Commerce Department economist, was named from the Second Ward. He also is a member of the city school board.

From the Third Ward, the council appointed Lee M. Rhoads, a contract administrator for the Navy Department, who lives at 407 Rosemary lane. Rhoads had been defeated by new Council Member Boyd Case in council elections this spring.

Jerry Klutz's Federal Diary column is not carried today, but his story on the convention of the American Federation of Government Employes appears on Page 5.

Named to new city posts were:

Harry Wells, 216 E. Fairfax st., as city clerk. Wells is a former student at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Appointed as the first Falls Church trial justice to preside over local Police Court was Falls Church Attorney William E. Finley, 703 N. Oak st. He will appoint his own clerk later, and the post of the new city sergeant to work under him will temporarily be filled by Police Chief Elliott H. Howe.

The council named Councilman Sherman Wells, father of the new city clerk, to serve as the new vice mayor. Wells, a Washington department store employe, lives at 216 E. Fairfax st.

Falls Church City Manager Roy F. Dunn was reappointed to his post, as was Town Attorney LaRue Van Meter, who is the newly named Falls Church Commonwealth's Attorney.

As the meeting began, Albert M. Orme was sworn in as mayor by outgoing Mayor Fenner Hazelgrove. Orme then swore in the two new council members elected last June: Mrs. Merrill Lee Chanel, a Washington motor company employe, of 501 W. Broad st., and Boyd Case, Falls Church contractor, of 812 Park ave.

The new mayor is chief of durable goods in the commodities division of the Office of International Trade, Commerce Department.

22 Red Feather Heads Meet To Map Campaign

Twenty-two businessmen and women who will head the Red Feather campaign's volunteer corps met at lunch yesterday at the Statler Hotel to map campaign plans.

Milton S. Kronheim, assistant general chairman of Business II units of the $4,500,000 drive, told the group they must instill the "spirit of winning" into volunteers.

Edward J. Keys, executive director and campaign manager of the Community Chest Federation, said that a single solicitor will be asked to cover between 15 and 25 business office buildings during this year's campaign. A larger group of volunteers is to meet at the Washington Hotel September 22, he said.

Attending yesterday's session were representatives of Washington, Alexandria and the counties of Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges.

READY FOR SCHOOL—Barbara Goetz, who will be 5 years old next month, smiled broadly yesterday as she mounted the steps of the Stanton Elementary School, Good Hope rd. and Alabama ave. se., with her mother and brother to register for kindergarten classes. She had a new school bag just like the one Mrs. William Goetz, 3217 Buena Vista ter. se., bought 7-year-old Ronnie. He will attend the second grade.

HEY! NO SLEEPING IN SCHOOL—Lynne Sharpe and her mother, Mrs. Frank Sharpe, 2310 Terrace rd. se., waited two hours to register with Mrs. May T. Kyle (left), principal of the Stanton School. Lynne showed she missed her afternoon nap by putting her head on the desk. Yesterday was the first day of registration for new students. Schools will be open again for registration today, Friday and on Tuesday and Thursday of next week. Classes begin Sept. 13.

By William Klemm—The Washington Post

SPACE AT A PREMIUM—Stanton School, with a capacity of 450 and an enrollment of 600 students last year, will be even more crowded this year. More than 100 new students were registered yesterday. Mothers came early and waited in line afraid children wouldn't get in.

'Mom and Dad' Theater Shut for No License

C. T. Nottingham, superintendent of licenses in the District, announced yesterday he had ordered the closing of the Dumbarton Theater, 1349 Wisconsin ave. nw., on the ground that it is operating without a license.

Enforcement of the closing order was temporarily suspended, however, pending a conference at 9:30 a. m. today in the Municipal Court office of Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King.

Nottingham said his office had denied the theater a license in February of this year on the basis of an inspection report that the building was "deficient." He said he did not recall the points of deficiency.

District Inspections Director Robert H. Davis said it was his recollection that combustible materials in the place had not been removed.

Nottingham said that the fact that the theater is operating, although a license had been denied, came to his attention only this week.

He said it was called to his attention by mention of the picture now playing at the Dumbarton, a sex education film called "Mom and Dad."

Slated to attend the conference in King's office are representatives of the Police Department, Fire Marshal's office, and officials of the license and inspection offices.

The theater is now in the process of being sold to settle an estate, according to Washington Attorney Martin F. O'Donoghue, a trustee for the sale. He said an $82,000 sales contract is now awaiting District Court approval here.

He said it was his understanding that present tenants of the theater hope to lease it from the new owner, and plan some $20,000 worth of repairs and remodeling when the sale is completed, to comply with regulations.

Man Held In Strangling Of His Wife

Woman Found Dead After Row Over Refusal To Get Dinner

A murder charge was lodged yesterday against Anson Merrick Sloan, 39, whose wife died Tuesday night in their Prince Georges County, Md., home with finger marks on her throat.

Sloan denied strangling his wife, Florence, 42, but admitted both had been drinking and there had been a brief scuffle before she died, police said.

The death occurred in the Sloan's brick bungalow at 403 Belford pl., Hampshire Knolls, on the edge of Takoma Park.

Sloan told detectives he had returned Monday from a visit to his parents in South Carolina and went Tuesday morning to pick up his luggage at Union Station.

After Sloan returned home early in the afternoon, police said, he and his wife had some drinks together. Police said Sloan told them that late in the afternoon his wife retired to a bedroom and refused to prepare dinner for their 6-year-old daughter, Felicia.

Police said Sloan related he had several times tried to persuade his wife to prepare the dinner but she had refused, and that on one of the times there was a brief scuffle in which he "may" have bruised his wife's throat.

Sloan, according to police, then prepared dinner for his daughter and then went out in the yard to cut the lawn. He said when he completed cutting the lawn he returned to the house at about 7 p. m. and found his wife lying on the living room floor.

"She seemed to be snoring and I couldn't awaken her," police quoted Sloan.

Sloan informed police he first tried to reach his own physician but was unable to do so. He said he then sent his daughter to the home of a neighbor, Fred W. Mugleston, at 401 Belford pl., to ask that he try to locate a doctor.

Mugleston summoned Dr. Robert Hunter of 5600 New Hampshire ave. ne., who pronounced Mrs. Sloan dead when he arrived at about 8:30 p. m. Dr. Hunter said the woman had apparently been dead only a few minutes.

Dr. Hunter notified one of the county's two medical examiners, Dr. John P. Maloney, who came to the home, examined the body and then notified police.

Finger Marks on Throat

Dr. Maloney said the woman had apparently died of a throat hemorrhage. He said he noted the woman's throat bore four finger marks on the left side and the impression of a thumb on the right side.

He said Mrs. Sloan's right eye was bruised and her lips were cut as though from a blow. She had bled profusely through the nose before she died, he added.

Dr. Maloney later performed an autopsy at Gasch's funeral home, Hyattsville.

Sloan, employed as a switchboard installation man by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was waiting quietly at his home when police, called by Dr. Maloney, arrived. They arrested him on an open charge.

Police booked Sloan on the murder charge yesterday on the advice of Assistant State's Attorney Hervey G. Machen.

Sloan was taken to the Hyattsville Jail where he is being held without bond. He will receive a preliminary hearing September 16 at 10 a. m. in Hyattsville Police Court.

New Legion Post Planned In Alexandria

Jasper L. McBride, publicity director for the World War II Veterans Jamboree in Alexandria, announced yesterday that a meeting will be held Saturday to organize a new American Legion Post in Alexandria.

Called by McBride "The Fighting 350th," the new post will be formed at George Washington High School at 8 p. m., in conjunction with a performance of the jamboree.

Reasons for forming a new post were contained in a copy of a resolution released by McBride. It condemned policies of existing Post No. 24.

McBride said 555 names had been signed on the resolution as of last night. He said 65 persons had signed a charter of the new post. Publication of the signatures will be withheld until after the organization meeting and election of officers, he added.

The resolution charged that a small minority of members has controlled Post No. 24. This group, he said, mismanaged the affairs of the post and violated its constitution and by-laws, as well as involved the post in political fights.

Post 24 cammander Ralph Sentman, notified of McBride's plans last night, termed the resolution "nothing but the statements of one man." He said that as far as he was concerned there was no justification for the charges set forth in the resolution released by McBride.

August Was Fine, Cool Month; The Weatherman Tells Us So

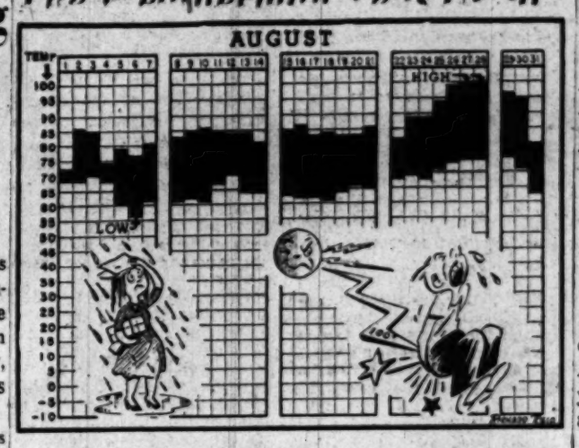

Chart shows daily high and low temperatures for August

August was a fine month. A cool month. A refreshing month.

And if you're still reminded of those recent days of sizzle and stupor, send your brickbats to the Weatherman.

He's the party who says August was fine—just fine.

Like yesterday. The temperature range was a pleasant 53 to 77. And today it will be about the same, 54 to 80.

The Weatherman won't argue, though, that August wasn't a month of violent extremes. There were cool days. There were hot days. There were rainy days. There were sunny days.

It really got hot at the tag end of the month, when temperature highs averaged a gasping 97 degrees from the 25th through the 30th.

It was awful. For the weather up to the 25th had been cool and invigorating, autumn-like. It had averaged about 85 degrees—unusual enough for August to have merited considerable discussion in itself.

Thus, the month was certainly an extremist, and something of a freak to boot. There was that huge ring around the sun on the 16th, for instance, that sent the city rubbernecking, like so many tourists at the Washington Monument.

For another extreme, consider the rainfall. Where a normal August receives 4.01 inches, almost twice as much fell last month. Eight inches, to be exact, 4.47 of them in the first four days. There is also the matter of sunshine. Usually, the sun shines 61 per cent of the possible sunshine hours in August; this time it shone 72 per cent of the time.

Getting back to the heat, now that it is no longer here, weather bureau records at the 24th and M st. nw. station show that 100-degree temperatures flattened the city on two days, the 27th and 28th. At National Airport, instruments there recorded 99 on those days, which The Washington Post reported.

Some may find slight solace in the fact that it was 108 degrees warm here on August 6, 1918.

Last month's low temperature was 56 on August 6. The all-time low of 49 was recorded on August 24, 1890, and August 31, 1934.

The month's heavy rainfall got off to a good start August 1, with 2.57 inches. On the 3d, .79 of an inch fell, followed by 1.11 inches on the 4th, to bring the four-day total to 4.47 inches. That 4.47 is .46 inch more than usually falls here over the entire month.

Other rainfalls on the 11th, 12th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 22d and the 30th, plus traces on three other days, brought the total to 8 inches.

The sun, apparently beaming in cool weather and hot alike, shone 303 hours of a possible 423, the Weather Bureau reported, or 72 per cent. Over the 53-year records the bureau has on sunshine, it has shone 61 per cent of the possible sunshine hours in August.

Only in the matter of wind was last month undistinguished. While its prevailing direction was southwest, instead of south, as is typical, its average daily velocity was 5.2 miles an hour. Most Augusts, it moves at 5.7 miles an hour. It reached its top speed on the 11th, when observers clocked it at 29 miles an hour.

Barrett Defends Policemen Accused of Beating Prisoner

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, returned to his desk at police headquarters yesterday and announced he will not see his men "knocked around."

Barrett was referring to the case of Navy Chief Radioman Archibald I. Koester, 30, who has charged he was brutally beaten by police after being arrested last Saturday night.

Koester has charged he was arrested without cause, beaten when he protested his arrest, and detained in a cell seven hours without water and without being allowed to contact Navy officers, an attorney or a physician.

Police say Koester was beaten after he attacked them, striking and biting them.

Koester was charged with assault, a charge on which he has been freed in $500 bond, and drunk and disorderly conduct. The records show a forfeiture of $15 collateral on the drunk and disorderly charges. The Navy man's attorney said he wanted the forfeiture rescinded and the case tried in court.

Barrett told a press conference yesterday he favors that, too.

"I want this thing to come out in the open," he said, "and I have instructed Lieut. Herbert Wanamaker to request Chief Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King to set aside the drunk and disorderly forfeitures."

Clark announced later in the day the forfeitures had been rescinded and the case placed on the Municipal Court calendar for Friday. It probably will be heard by Judge John P. McMahon.

Answering Koester's claim he was not given water, Barrett said: "I have a report here from the precinct showing that the station clerk went back to his cell every half hour, and I also have a report from Inspector George Wallrodt, who was acting superintendent of police, that he visited the precinct at 3 a. m. Inspector Wallrodt's report shows the man was given water but was so drunk he spilled it on himself."

Barrett said it would be hard to claim Koester had been held incommunicado.

"His wife was with him at the time of the arrest and knew he was being held," the police chief said.

As for the actual beating, Barrett said, "I am not going to see my men knocked around. The law provides that they can use a reasonable amount of force to maintain arrests, and my men are not out there to be knocked around and bitten just because they are doing their duty."

He said one policeman had five fingers bitten and that a second suffered a bite "worse than a dog bite."

Declaring he thought this was a case the Navy should also investigate, Barrett said police have obtained statements from three doctors at Georgetown University Hospital to the effect that when Koester was taken there for treatment of scalp lacerations the cursing was so loud it awakened many persons in the hospital.

New Group Petitions to Buy Historic Woodlawn Estate

Formation of Woodlawn Public Foundation, Inc., to buy the historic estate below Mount Vernon was announced last night by Armistead Rood, Washington attorney.

Rood said a petition will be filed with the Circuit Court of Fairfax, Va., before 5 p. m. today, asking leave of Judge Paul Brown of the Fairfax court to intervene in the proceeding for the purpose of buying the 126-acre estate.

The court, it was disclosed August 21, had authorized sale of the estate that George Washington gave as a wedding present to his adopted granddaughter, Nelly Custis, to the Immaculate Heart of Mary Mission Society, Inc., for $165,000.

Rood said the court's decree did not become effective for a 15-day period expiring tonight and that a substantially larger amount would be offered for it.

Rood said the Woodlawn Public Foundation would incorporate as a charitable, nonprofit corporation in Virginia for the purpose of preserving the estate as a public monument open to the public.

John A. K. Donovan, attorney for the mission, with national headquarters in Arlington, said when sale of the estate was first announced that it would be used as a boys' preparatory school.

Rood, himself secretary of the new group, said the corporation already had considerable funds at its disposal, and listed the following other corporation heads:

George Maurice Morris, past president of the American Bar Association and speaker of the International Bar Association house of deputies, president; Elwood H. Seal of Broad Run, Va., former corporation counsel for the District and president of the Washington and Lee Alumni Society, acting as attorney in today's proceeding; John W. Rixey Smith of Fairfax County, president of the Virginia Society and former secretary to Senator Carter Glass; Alvin V. Baird of Oak Hill, Delaplane, Va.; Miss Genevieve Hendricks, prominent Washington interior decorator and member of the executive committee of the American Interior Decorators' Association; and Roy G. Allman, Washington attorney, trustees.

Other trustees will be announced later, Rood said.

She has been ill since 1943 in Philadelphia, and guardians were appointed in 1945 at the request of her brother, A. H. Woodard.

Crash Kills Alexandria Dentist Near Richmond

Highway Accidents Cause 3 Deaths; Boy, 11, Man Die In Prince Georges

Area traffic accidents yesterday caused the deaths of an Alexander (Va.) dentist, an 11-year-old Forestville (Md.) boy and a Baltimore man.

Dr. Garrett H. Delp of Alexandria was fatally injured about 7 p. m. when his automobile came into collision with a heavy truck, the Associated Press reported.

Dr. Delp, a graduate of the Medical College of Virginia, practiced dentistry in Richmond and Mount Jackson for a number of years before leaving in 1940 to practice in Alexandria.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ethel Bauer Delp; two daughters, Mrs. W. M. Ogg of Richmond and Mrs. James N. Lee of Washington; a son, Garrett H. Delp, jr., of Richmond, and three brothers, Wiley, Harvey and Levi Delp of Comers Rock, Va.

The boy was John Allen, jr., of 7609 Walters lane, Forestville, Md., who was struck by an automobile while riding his bicycle on the Marlboro pike near his home at about 10 a. m.

Police said the car that struck the boy was driven by James S. Fowler of 5818 Ritchie rd., Forestville. Fowler was freed in $500 bond after being charged with reckless driving and manslaughter.

The other victim, identified as George Engler of Baltimore, was killed at about 6 a. m., when struck by a heavy tractor-trailer truck on Baltimore blvd. in Muirkirk.

Benjamin T. Linton, 25, of Chester, Pa., was identified by police as the driver of the truck. He said he saw the man and blew his horn, but the pedestrian became excited and jumped into the truck's path.

Linton was released in $1000 bond pending a hearing Friday in Laurel Police Court on a manslaughter charge.

A Havre de Grace, Md., man was critically injured and one member of a party from the Cuban Embassy in Washington was less seriously injured Tuesday night when two cars collided on U. S. 40, a mile south of Havre de Grace.

Kenneth W. Dudeck, 25, of Havre de Grace, was driving south. He was taken to Harford Memorial Hospital at Havre de Grace and is in a critical condition, only semiconscious and with a possible skull fracture.

Mrs. Juana Maria Cata, 42, of Havana and the Cuban Embassy here, was treated at the hospital for several fractured ribs.

The other members of the party did not require hospital treatment. They were Jose Alvarez, secretary to the president of the Cuban Senate, and his chauffeur, Raphael T. Valdes. The Cubans were on their way to Hoboken, N. J., to meet a ship.

Vice Squad Operations Are Revised

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett yesterday denied there is any "mystery" to the wholesale shuffle of the vice squad, but at the same time announced revised operations for the squad.

"What we're doing," said Barrett, "is splitting the squad into two divisions with a sergeant in charge of each division."

Until now, the vice squad has been separated into three units with each unit being assigned a certain number of precincts.

Under the new plan, 7th st. nw. will be the boundary line. One division of the squad will work all territory west of 7th st. and the other division all territory east of 7th st.

Under changes announced Tuesday and effective yesterday, six new men were added to the vice squad and four of the squad's members were transferred to other assignments.

Among those joining the vice squad are Sergt. Albert R. Nicholson and Detective Sergeant James Roche, who will command the vice squad divisions under the over-all command of Lieut. Roy Blick.

Woman, 80, Felled; Man, 22, Gets Jail

The sentence was imposed by Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott on William T. Martin, of 201 I st. se., who doggedly insisted he didn't touch 80-year-old Melinda Bryant of 82 C st. sw.

"I can't possibly believe that an aged, nearly blind, decrepit woman would come down here and accuse you of assaulting her," Judge Scott declared.

Mrs. Bryant, who had to be helped to the stand, told the court that on August 26, Martin, who had lived at her home, came back to get his clothes. They had words when she answered the door, and he knocked her to the floor, she said. She was not injured by the fall.

Martin said he did not touch her, but admitted, "I didn't like it when I found my clothes were packed and sitting on the back porch."

"That statement is the straw that indicates she was telling the truth, when she said you struck her," Judge Scott declared in imposing sentence.

Know Your Victim

Herman Gaston Brown, 36, no fixed address, yesterday was sentenced to 30 days in jail for stealing a park policewoman's pocketbook. Brown was arrested August 17, after he stole the purse, which contained $31 in cash, from Grace H. Judy, who was on undercover duty in the Ellipse. He was found guilty of the charge the next day by Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott, who imposed the sentence yesterday.

Bomb Case Auto Sale

The bomb-blasted auto in which 30-year-old Arlington Businessman William A. Denekas met his death will be sold to the highest bidder at the Arlington Property Yard, 29th st. and South Seminary rd., at 11 a. m. September 8.

The 1941 Nash, nearly demolished in the explosion that was touched off when Denekas turned the ignition key, will be sold by the Liberty Loan Corp. of Virginia. Denekas was slain June 7 in front of his home at 5837 North 21st st. Arlington police still are searching for the Denekas slayer.

Henry Luce 3d Sued . . .

Henry Luce 3d, of 1558 33d st. nw., son of the publisher of Time, Life and Fortune magazines, was named defendant in a suit for $15,000 damages filed Tuesday in New Haven, Conn., by Mrs. Edith Tulli of West Haven, Conn., according to the Associated Press.

Mrs. Tulli said in her complaint that she was struck on October 1, 1947, by an automobile driven by Luce who was a student at Yale University at that time. The complaint said Mrs. Tulli was carrying her infant son across the street at the time of the accident. She asked damages of $10,000 for herself and $5,000 for the infant.

Policeman Asks $50,000

Park Policeman Alfred D. Beye of 2701 4th st. ne. has asked District Court for $50,000 damages for injuries he received when he was struck by an auto while on his motorcycle in Rock Creek Park August 6.

He was the second motorcycle policeman to file suit for that amount in two days. Monday, Metropolitan Police Corpl. Aubrey S. Yowaiski filed suit for injuries he received when he was struck by an auto while riding on his motorcycle in September, 945.

Named defendant in Beye's suit, filed Tuesday, with Ethel G. Westerman of 2729 Ordway st. nw. The accident occurred while Beye was parked just east of the K st. overpass in Rock Creek Parkway, according to the suit.

Bus Benefits Boosted

The Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. yesterday announced a boost in hospital benefits for its employes. The firm said the action is "in keeping with the changing economic conditions."

Under the new plan, the company will give its employes free hospital insurance that pays $7 a day up to 40 days. Heretofore, the company paid for policies that gave employes up to 31 days in the hospital at $4 to $5 a day. The new policy also permits coverage of employes' families by small weekly payments.

Parking Meters Urged

Merchants in the 900 block of Pennsylvania ave. nw. yesterday asked the District Department of Traffic and Motor Vehicles to install parking meters in front of their stores.

They filed a formal petition protesting a police crackdown on parking in the area. It said the trouble had been made more acute by shutting down of a parking lot in their block several weeks ago. Their petition called for the parking meters to be placed on the north side of the street.

Carrier Boy Is Carried Away . . .

The Washington Post

COCKPIT VISITOR—Fifty of The Washington Post's carrier boys were taken for a 30-minute flight over Washington yesterday as guests of TWA in one of the airline's newest Constellations. An additional thrill was had by 13-year-old Joe Grills of 3312 Circle Hill rd., Alexandria, Va., when Capt. William Dugan of Edgehill dr., Alexandria, invited him up to the control room and showed him how the big plane is operated. Joe is no stranger to flying, however. His father is Col. Herbert Grills, who has a record of 20 years in Army aviation and is now on duty at the Pentagon after wartime service in the Pacific.

50 Post Carriers Thrilled By Flight in 'Constellation'

Operation Post Carrier, with its rollicking cargo of 50 squirming youngsters, roared away from National Airport under four 2500-horsepower engines at 3:22 p. m. yesterday.

It was the first flight for many of the lads, born to take aircraft for granted. It was the prelude for inauguration of transcontinental passenger service by Trans World Airways' luxurious 18-sleeper Constellations, at 5 p. m.

Capt. William Dugan of Alexandria, plane commander with 2500 hours at the helm of silvery "Connies," got an authoritative preflight check of controls and instruments. It was given by 13-year-old Joe Grills, 3312 Circle Hill rd., Alexandria.

Joe proudly acknowledged he'd been flying before—with his dad, Col. H. L. Grills, a veteran of 20 years with the Air Forces, now stationed at the Pentagon.

It was perhaps the first time in history that so many kids pushed through a 5-by-4-foot doorway at once. There followed a mad rush for choice seats.

Blonde Miss Mary Woodward, 64 Galveston pl. sw., and Miss Connie Harper, a blue-eyed brunette who lives at 1363 Somerset pl. nw., saw that safety belts were secured.

Coincidentally, the motto for the Constellations' transcontinental service is: "Ask for Connie—she's here."

Youngest passenger aboard was 4-year-old Damon Rarey of Troy, N. Y., grandson of The Washington Post's circulation supervisor, Louis E. Hodge.

Damon has an airman's heritage. His father was killed in a P-51 over France, and his stepfather is an Air Forces major. The youngster was about the most composed, if a somewhat inquisitive, member of the bunch yesterday.

The giant plane touched down at 3:45 p. m., having cruised over the Eastern Shore and Chesapeake Bay at 300 miles an hour.

Lieut. Goforth Reburial Today In Arlington

Reburial services for Lieut. (j. g.) Robert H. W. Goforth, son of Herndon W. and Effie D. Goforth of 1407 N. Kenilworth st., Arlington, Va., and 19 other members of the armed services will be held at 2 p. m. today in Arlington Cemetery.

Lieutenant Goforth, a flier operating off the aircraft carrier Lexington, died off Cebu, P. I., September 12, 1944. He was 21 years old and had previously been a student at the University of Illinois.

Besides his parents, he is survived by three sisters and a brother, Dr. Louie Junco of Seattle, Mrs. Helen Sommer of Detroit and Mrs. Joyce Kopp and George T. Goforth, both of Arlington.

Mrs. Josephine Shortall

Mrs. Josephine Shortall, formerly active in club work here, died last Thursday at Neptune Heights, N. J., friends disclosed yesterday.

Married Four Years to Man Six Years Older, Of Lesser Education, Girl Is Inconsolably Homesick for Family and Old Friends Far Away

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Jim is six years older than I, and he finished only one year of high school, whereas I am a college graduate, but I honestly don't think these facts make any difference in our marriage.

When we married four years ago, he agreed to settle in my home town; but six months later, when he was discharged from the Navy, he insisted that we move to his home town or he would leave me.

I reminded him of his promise given before marriage, and he said he meant it at the time but had changed his mind. I was extremely confused and although I protested, I came with him half way across the continent.

He is a good husband and devoted to our two-year-old son, and he has never broken a promise since, but after three and a half years here, I am still wretchedly homesick for my family and old friends. I've honestly tried to be content and have made many new friends here, but the heartache persists.

Talks of Divorce, Man Almost Weeps

JIM has no close family ties here, nor even close friends, as he keeps to himself; and I have tried to get him to return to my part of the country, where he could obtain employment if he chose; but he flatly refuses and tells me to go alone if I'm so homesick.

I've considered leaving him and taking the boy, and there is a splendid position open to me if I return in a few months. Mother would tend the baby while I worked. Jim loves me, I know; but he is very stubborn and there is no hope that he would follow me and agree to live there if I go.

Am I selfish in wanting to return home? Or would I be justified in leaving him? Do you think he is bluffing when he tells me to go? Once when I told him I had seen a lawyer about a divorce, he almost wept and begged me to reconsider. Your good advice will be greatly appreciated. A. A.

Wife's Complaint Isn't Reasonable

DEAR A. A.: It is a fundamental social principle, generally upheld by law, that the domicile of the wife and children follows that of the husband and father.

It is Jim's incontrovertible right to maintain his dependents in the community where he finds a means of livelihood most congenial to his taste; and so long as he supplies them with the necessities (or comforts) of life, up to the level of his ability to provide, and is a loyal, devoted spouse in that setup, he is giving no provocation for divorce on tenable grounds.

Thus you would be guilty of willful desertion without due cause, if you were to return to your family, taking the baby, simply to assuage nomesickness, or on the argument that Jim had lured you into marriage with a false promise, selfishly broken.

Without trying to excuse his expediency on this point, nevertheless I must remind that you've condoned the grievance, from the legal view, by living with him for almost four years since and producing his child in the interim; and it is to Jim's credit—suggestive of basic stability—that he has been "as good as his word" in all other aspects of mutual dealings. Comparatively, you make a poor showing in badgering him about your intrinsic failure to make a tolerable emotional adjustment to marriage.

Her Muddled Mind Is Causing Trouble

AS I SEE the picture, you don't love Jim, consequently have a feeling of living with a man who seems more stranger than friend. And the fact that he loves you doesn't alter your sense of unreality about the arrangement. It is this sense of unreality, combined with unweaned infantile attachment to a mom-mother (who is wheedling you to "come home," I gather) that causes you to strain against the new design-for living you blundered into.

Why did you marry, if not for love? Because you felt ripe for matrimony, for a matron's status and a home of your own, so-called, I suppose. The fact that you were "fixed" on settling in your home town indicates that you were far more interested in the titular and institutional benefits of marriage than in the man you accompanied to the altar.

It isn't so much the place of residence as it is your muddled mind that is causing trouble. So for advice, "Heal thyself," via intensive psychological self-assessment and social reorientation, before contemplating a drastic change in your life-course. M. H.

BOUFFANT ball gown in the voluminous-skirted manner of Christian Dior. The luxury-textured fabric is a crisp taffeta. Yards of fine net are gathered onto the apron skirt billowed out by a crinoline stiffened taffeta underskirt. Pink iridescent taffeta bows with long streamers are tied at either side. Comes in black and pastel shades and will be available after September 7 at Best & Co.

Ball Gowns Have Ante-Bellum Air

THE silhouette varies according to individual tastes in the majority of this season's clothes. But for evening wear there is a definitely defined formula — strapless decolletage, huge bouffant skirt, fitted bodice.

Slim skirts are being reserved for dinner dresses. For formal ball gowns the great, billowing skirt appears to have won the favor of both New York and Paris designers.

There is an ante-bellum air to these ball gowns for 1948. The shoulder strap has all but vanished and frequently the low neckline is modestly draped with a bertha of net or lace, clasped in front with a cameo or jeweled pin after the fashion of 1850 modes.

Below the small, boned bodice, the skirt becomes a wonderful thing indeed, fanning out handsomely to the floor. More often than not the skirt is lined with crinoline to give it sufficient stiffening. Sometimes it is worn over a hooped petticoat. At any rate, it is never permitted to swing lazily in flat folds. It stands out from the figure and swings crisply with every movement.

Favorite fabric for such gowns are faille taffeta or satin, stiffened with crinoline. Net also is important, either as an overskirt or as part of the trimming of a taffeta skirt.

Artificial flowers, also reminiscent of pre-Civil War days, are being used as trimming this winter. A wreath of roses may stretch across the bodice, to be repeated in clusters throughout a bouffant net skirt. Or they may be concentrated into one large bouquet at the waistline or hem. Bows of ribbon are important too, as are, in fact, any form of decoration which gives added importance to the huge skirt idea.

Make-Up Trick

Here's a wonderful beauty trick for women with long thin noses. A faint dab of rouge applied just under the tip of the nose will make it look shorter, saucy and slightly turned up.

Reports on Pilgrimage to Paris

PARIS is now as it was in 1911, a style center of incomparable elegance and chic.

Miss Elizabeth Fairall, Washington's dean of fashion, made this assertion yesterday upon her return from an annual pilgrimage to the French style capital. She saw her first Paris fashion opening in the spring of 1911 and now, 37 years later, she is still thrilled by what that city, fashionwise, has to offer. It has been her duty to scan both the local and European markets over the years and her opinion remains:

"Paris is still an exciting and inspiring city of fashion. American designers, individualists though they may be, are still looking there for examples; and American women, those who can afford it, are still buying heavily in the French market."

MISS FAIRALL'S statement contradicts assertions made by other American authorities who maintain that French fashion is losing ground.

"If that were true," Miss Fairall pointed out, "then I don't understand why, this year, there were more American buyers in Paris than in any other year since I have attended the showings. They came from the smallest merchandising houses in America and the showrooms were so packed that it was difficult to see the models."

Miss Fairall recalls the days following World War I when Chanel made headlines with a knee-length skirt in Paris. She thinks that the fashion showings in those years were not to be compared with those of today.

'Pseudo Opals' Are Button News

In jewel buttons, biggest development are "pseudo opals" that glow as softly as real opals. Most dramatic opal is done as a seven-stone cluster set on looped golden wire frame. Others are done singly as medallions in golden settings. Outstanding for its tailored mood is a single, large, bright colored opal set in a beveled metal frame, shiny and elegant. Opals are also available as studs.

Pearls decorate buttons, too. Tiny seed pearls are wired in circlets or in straight rows against golden reflector button backs. Rhinestones follow two trends this fall. As small colored stones, they are set in the center of a filagree disk, not unlike a sunflower in pattern. Newer in feeling are the giant gold stones as big as your little fingernail. Some of these are set singly in a colored plastic cup; and others are clustered in multicolored units for dazzling brightness. Conversation piece is the golden cubed button, each side of which is a single large square rhinestone.

Hawaii's Luxury Hotels, Again Tourist Crammed, Offer Lush Holiday Stays

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Sept. 1.—During the war our military requisitioned Hawaii's luxury hotels but today they're handsomely refurnished and crammed with tourists who, of necessity, are equipped with plenty of folding money. Plane fares from the California mainland have been reduced, cutting into potential boat travel, and so far the Matson Line has only a single top-drawer passenger ship, the Lurline, on the island run.

The arrivals and departures of the boat, with its 700-plus sightseers, is so important that recently one of the two local gazettes ran an eight-column headline which screamed: "Lurline Sails on Time."

The Royal Hawaiian, which fronts Waikiki Beach, has been decorated in a lushly peculiar manner with lobby furniture incongruously trimmed with yards of Victorian fringe, huge arrangements of dried plants which, for some esoteric reason, are gilded, and a semicircular bar backed with corrugated glass down which water cascades continuously.

Beach Boys Are Luxuries

WAIKIKI BEACH is a mere sliver of sand, curved, dotted with palms, lapped by small waves with a second row of combers breaking about a quarter mile offshore. Next to the Royal Hawaiian is the Outrigger Club, where the sporty element park their surf boards.

In the "old days," agile visitors hired beach boys for around 50 to 75 dollars monthly. The "boys" taught surf-boarding, kept their clients from getting sunburned and eased sore muscles by a treatment of lomi lomi, Hawaiian-type massages.

Right now, a beach boy is a decided luxury, but we did see a few, very dark, a trifle wizened, and not the fine chunks of men travel folder addicts imagine. It was fun to see them paddle to the reef on a surf board, their bronzed "customer" spread-eagled before them. Then, after threading the surf, coast back on the crest of a single comber.

One of the nicest places to stay in Honolulu is "The Palms," a large one-story house revamped into one or two rooms and lanai combination apartments. There is a swimming pool and tennis court and the whole attractive ensemble is owned and managed by the former Jane Shadduck of New York, who was once married to the much-married Dan Topping and is now the wife of Dick Durant, one of Honolulu's rising young medicos.

Around town there are all sorts of exotic places to eat and still more extraordinary things to eat. Smart for cocktails is the Penthouse, for dinners, the Tropics, and for grand-manner food, Trader Vic's. On a par with New York's finer restaurants is inelegantly named Charcoal Broiler, where tiny Japanese waitresses, swaddled in traditional obis, serve with fluttery efficiency. Sheer heaven, though, is Don, the Beachcomber's. Don, in the flesh, manages this spot while his former wife runs the more touristy joint in Los Angeles.

Tropical Huts House Restaurant

THE RESTAURANT is a series of peaked, thatched-roofed, enormous huts, their high-raftered insides lined with woven luahala palm. Each table is a solid, oddly shaped piece of monkeypod wood, the lamps are giant bubbles of glass (used as fishnet floats) caught in woven palm nets, and the whole cluster of houses is set among high palms landscaped with rills of water trickling from mammoth man-eating clam shells, and among the tropical vegetation an occasional Polynesian god leers woodenly. The works are floodlit at night and are really amazingly beautiful.

The meals are served buffet style with all sorts of condiments, strange vegetables, curries, which would set the average food editor crazy.

A nice touch is the varicolored plates. The Hawaiian girl at the buffet refused to let this department use a red plate because we had on a blue dress, so we ended by piling everything on yellow.

All bars close at midnight, no liquor is sold after 12, and to get around this "kapu" there is a "bottle club" called the Lampost. It's a big barn of a place with a 75-cent admission, plus the privilege of renting a liquor locker.

The Lampost is run by a former Navy man, once a boxer, named Al Schaff. The less snappy Honolulu element sit near the dance floor, the swells, who come very late, fringe the outskirting. GIs dance with local gals wearing "mumus," a shapeless Mother Hubbard garment introduced by our missionaries.

A few locals shake a neat hula, dancing without shoes. It's all extraordinarily respectable, and Schaff himself, a dark, thickset guy with a nice smile, sits drinking cup after cup of black coffee and keeping a relentless eye on his charges.

Dinner at Governor's Mansion

OUR FIRST Honolulu dinner was at Washington Place, the official residence of Hawaii's Governor and Mrs. Ingram Stainback. Washington Place was built by a New York sea captain over a century ago. It received its unusual name because the captain's wife, Mrs. John Dominiso, rented a suite of rooms in the big house to the American Commissioner who established the United States Legation there on Washington's Birthday, 1898. Hawaii's last reigning monarch, Queen Liliuokalani, spent the last 34 years of her life in Washington Place.

Her bedroom is still kept intact and is furnished incongrously in Victorian style—a huge bed covered with many doodads, marble topped dresser and a really beautiful table made of 10 varieties of native woods.

Guarding Washington Place door are the Stainback's two white police dogs. Cocktails and such are served in a giant room partly furnished with elaborately carved teakwood furnishings given Queen Lili by the Emperor of China. One side of the room opens on a lanai surrounded with bamboo groves and centered with an exquisite tile foundation, also a gift from Cathay's ruler.

As an aloha or welcome this department was garlanded with a lei made of small vanda orchids and, sitting on a sofa, long rum drink in hand, we felt that it was pleasant indeed to be an American official in mid-Pacific or even be an acquaintance of same.

To Join Capital's Debutante Ranks This Season

AFTER freckles and suntans have gone with the summer, there'll be a new crop of debutantes at dances and teas. There are reports of record bookings and record beauties for the Christmas holidays. Formal presentations will begin the end of November, and during the latter part of December scarcely a day will pass without at least four major parties. Beaux and balls are not enough for today's debutante. She usually has a career or a job or a degree to think about as well. And after the holiday festivities, she is busy as ever with interests as varied as her costumes

MISS ELENORE DEWITT TOWNSEND, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John William Townsend. She will be presented by her parents at a tea at home on November 27. A tea dance was given in her honor last season at the Washington Club

Elena Olive Is Engaged

The engagement of their daughter, Miss Elena Valdimir Olive, to Lieut. Peter N. Wolkonsky, USA, has been announced by Mr. and Mrs. Vladimir S. Olive of Washington. Lieutenant Wolkonsky is the son of Mrs. Nathalie P. Scheffer of Washington.

The bride-elect attended Garrison Forrest School, Baltimore, and Foxcroft School in Middleburg. Lieutenant Wolkonsky attended St. Albans School, Washington, and was graduated from Georgetown University School of Foreign Service. He served with the United States First Infantry Division and as a paratrooper with the OSS in the European theater during World War 11.

The wedding will take place the latter part of October.

Mrs. Tenney, Herbert Dowd Are Married

Mrs. Phyllis Tenney was married yesterday evening at Grace Lutheran Church to Herbert W. Dowd, the Rev. Gerhardt Lenski officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Keeler Tenney of Washington and Col. Parker Tenney of Palm Beach, Fla. Given in marriage by her brother, Dudley B. Tenney, she wore an aqua chiffon gown with a matching tulle hat and she carried a small colonial bouquet. Her daughter, Miss Mary Adams Tenney, was her only attendant. Engene Mullin was best man. A wedding supper followed at the bride's home.

Mrs. Dowd, a graduate of Holton Arms School and Sweet Briar College, is the widow of Lieut. Edward C. Tenney. Mr. Dowd is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Dowd of Valley Stream, Long Island. He was graduated from Muhlenberg College, Allentown, Pa., and received his master's degree from Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts College.

Following their wedding trip the newlyweds will reside at Fort Devens, Mass., while Mr. Dowd continues his graduate study.

Feminine Staff Of White House Know State Secrets

"Every President now has a Girl Friday who knows more state secrets than his wife."

Merriman Smith, author and White House correspondent for the United Press, so reports in his article, "Those Women in the White House," which appears in the September Coronet. He states that each top member of the President's staff—the three presidential secretaries, the aides and the administrative assistants—has a similar Girl Friday.

These women of the White House do not, of course, influence big decisions, but they can be very helpful in getting ideas before the President at the most favorable time, he writes.

Make-Up for Smoky Gray Tones

Now that smoky shades of gray and taupe rank high in fall and winter fashions, it's a smart idea, says the September issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl, to study the reaction of your complexion to the muted shades.

Hold some slate gray, elephant gray or taupe fabric against your face and hands and see the effect. Then dab on red lipstick as an accessory touch and learn how radiant and bright you'll look against the neutral background.

To help you determine the shade of red best suited to your complexion tint, Charm suggests a warm, golden red for a skin that is ivory-toned; for a rachel or medium complexion, a bright, clear red; for skin with a rosy undertone, red with a slightly blue cast.

Charm advises make-up foundation keyed to your complexion shade to add smoothness and color to your skin and to hold the powder on longer. Eye shadow, deftly applied to the outer corners of your upper eyelids, gives subtle emphasis to your eyes, says Charm. Misty-blue eye shadow lights up an ivory complexion.

About Lessons in Glass Painting

Do you know of anyone who can give me some lessons in painting on glass—the sort of work you see on clocks and mirrors sometimes? L. T.

There is a studio on Wisconsin ave. which gives lessons in such painting, as well as in decorating trays and restoring antique objets d'art. The telephone number is North 1842.

Attention E. F.: The advice we recently gave you about soaking gas stove burners and pipes in a washing soda solution applies only to those made entirely of cast iron. The top part of some two-piece burners is aluminum, and washing soda will darken this metal. It should not be used on it.

Good daily care will help you avoid the use of drastic cleaning measures. The Washington Gas Light Co. advises wiping burners daily with a clean, damp cloth. Remove from range occasionally and scrub with fine steel wool and hot soapy water, if necessary, without submerging burner. Avoid getting soap into burner holes.

Can you tell me if there is any method of cooking cantaloupe or honeydew mellon? I like these very much, but am on a no-raw-fruit-or-vegetable diet. R. R.

Here is a recipe for baked cantaloupe:

2 cantaloupes
3 cups sliced peaches
½ cup sugar
Few grains mace
Mint sprigs

Halve cantaloupes; remove seeds. Combine peaches, sugar and mace. Fill cantaloupes with peaches, arranging slices in radiating pattern on top. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) for 15 minutes. Garnish with mint and serve at once. Serves 4.

Also, you can cook it as a sauce combining it with peaches. Peel, seed and dice or slice the cantaloupes, add an equal portion of sliced peaches. To cook them, make a sirup by combining one cup orange juice, one cup water and one cup sugar (use more or less sugar according to your taste). Bring sirup to boil, drop in diced cantaloupe and peaches and allow to boil for only two or three minutes.

What are the correct margin proportions for framing a picture? I wish to mount one on white paper. As I recall, contrary to popular opinion, the sides should be larger than the bottom margin or at least equal. D. W.

On all pictures, regardless of shape, the bottom margin should be the widest. If the picture is square, the top and side margins should be the same width. If the picture is horizontal, side margins can be wider or equal to the top. With a vertical picture, the side margins should be narrower or equal to the top margin.

What can I do to remove mildew from a baby carriage of black leatherette with gray leatherette inside. E. L.

First, brush all loose mold from the inside and outside of the carriage with a wisk broom. Do this out-of-doors to prevent scattering the mildew in the house. To get the mold completely out of the creases, run a vacuum cleaner attachment over the surface. Now, when the loose mildew has been removed, wipe the leatherette with mild soap and water applied with a soft cloth. As you no doubt know, mildew is a fungus which grows into the leather and it may not be possible to completely remove all of the stain. In order to remove the odor from the mildew and prevent its further growth, apply a product sold in the housewares departments of most department stores for this purpose.

If, after the above treatment, you find that the carriage is still too stained to be usable, you could paint it with a coat of quick-drying enamel. Before you paint, open the top so that it is stretched.

I have lost my recipe for Russian tea and I would appreciate it very much if you could publish it for me. I would like to serve it at a party. As I recall the ingredients include orange and pineapple juice with freshly brewed tea, but the rest I've forgotten. J. P. C.

PETUNIA!

I hung my hankies out to dry
And then a vagrant breeze
Pasted them like blossoms
On all the apple trees!

Next time, Petunia, hang 'em like this. This system will keep heavy things like bathmats from slipping off, too.

The only recipe for Russian tea which I have does not call for either orange or pineapple juice, but I see no reason why both could not be added to the suggestions for making it which follow:

For Russian tea use freshly brewed, not too strong tea which may be served either hot or cold. A slice of lemon may be placed in the cup or glass (the Russians always use glasses) over which the hot brew is poured, sugar being added according to individual taste. The Russians consider a rich preserved strawberry a great addition; a maraschino cherry may be used if preserved strawberries are not available.

CORRECTION: The small boxes of matches sold by a local supermarket chain and mentioned in yesterday's "Ask Anne" column are larger than those D. J. M. is looking for, we regret to say. The smallest size box of safety matches this chain carries is 1¾ by 2¼ inches. The match buyer for the firm advises that the matches D. J. M. is asking about—tiny boxes to be used in a 1 by 1½-inch cover—are made only in Sweden and are not being imported to this country now.

'Modern and Livable'

Airy, Rambler House Chosen for 'Home of '48'

By Lucia Brown

TO gain spaciousness and keep variety, Manning Modern will run the whole gamut of greens in decorating its "Home of '48."

"The house is one of Carl M. Freeman's California ramblers," Isabelle Karekin, interior decorator at Manning's, explains. "It's low-slung, but open and airy, and we want the interior to look as spacious as possible. That's why we're using many shades of green instead of chopping up the rooms in a lot of different colors."

The model house, located in Hillwood Manor, will be one of the 13 in the "Homes of '48" exhibit which is sponsored by The Washington Post and 26 other local firms. It will be open to the public for a four-week's period, beginning September 12.

You'll find other colors beside green in the house, of course. But they'll serve only as accents to this background color, giving variety of mood to the different rooms. There'll be variety in other ways, too.

"I deeply dislike seeing a room with all the furniture in the same wood," says Miss Karekin, who has done numerous Washington houses, including the Mexican Embassy.

"We're planning to mix blond and dark woods in the living room," she continued. "Walls—the three of exposed brick—will be painted a pale, celadon green. The third wall is of glass and will have traverse curtains in a cinnamon and citron print."

Floors in the living room are a deep chocolate asphalt tile. Citron scatter rugs will be used on them. Upholstery will be in forest green, chartreuse, white, and cinnamon.

"THE living room will be a 'splashy' room," says Miss Karekin, "so there'll be a change of mood when you step into the bedroom, with its antique gold walls. Draperies and spread will be of acid green taffeta and the bed and dressing table of black lacquer."

The other bedroom in the house will be furnished as a combination study and guest room. Walls will again be green and the short draperies will be of an abstract print in blues and green. The spread on the daybed will be emerald green. The room will be "spiked" with tomato red, with an occasional chair and a couple of pillows in this color.

All the pictures on the walls of the house will be originals by Washington artists. Miss Karekin, an artist herself thinks its a good chance to show off some of their work that fits beautifully in this kind of interior.

Wallpaper for the kitchen has also been selected by Miss Karekin. One wall will be covered with a fine hand-print paper in a harvest scene design. It has a gray-green background, with accents of lemon yellow, brick red, and deep peacock blue. The same blue will be used on the other walls.

"The greens in the house will range all the way from yellow green to deep blue green," says the Manning decorator. "We're going to use good modern furniture with simple, clean-cut lines and no junky "novelties." We want it to be good looking and livable. I hope you like it!"

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

ISABELLE KAREKIN, interior decorator at the Manning Modern Furniture Co., considers a handsome, gold-shaded lamp for possible use beside a curved, forest-green sofa in the Hillwood Manor model "Home of '48." The tweed material covering the sofa has a non-tarnishable, metallic thread woven in with the forest green

Movie Houses Can Be Gayer By Using Clear, Fresh Hues

By Dorothy Draper

WHEN we think of the theater, we think of color and glamour, but could any place be less glamorous than the usual theater?

The outside need not look like a garish palace but could be designed as an intimate building with all the charm of a delightful country club. Why not put movie houses on the edge of town with plenty of room for parking and surrounded by a lovely garden, so that they become a pleasant community meeting place with modern lighting, good ventilation, clear, fresh colors, instead of a place of dark and dismal shadows on the busiest street in town?

When you finally get inside the theater, what do you find? The cashier greets you from a drab-looking cubicle. The entrance is a dreary march of ugly carpet. The walls are either overdecorated or hung with dusty material completely out of step with our clean-cut, modern world.

Why couldn't the interior of a movie house be painted sky blue from tip to toe with chartreuse curtains and leatherette seats? And is there any reason why the ushers couldn't wear pimiento-red coats?

AND why couldn't friendly foyers with comfortable seating arrangements have interesting displays which would dramatize the current show? For instance, if the picture was about Lord Nelson, how about a hat, pistol and old maps of that period? Or dramatize something of local interest by using a series of shadow boxes, well lighted, with an exhibition from the local historical society or the garden club.

Decorating Hints: Clear, fresh color in fabric and paint costs no more than drab, dreariness, whether it be in a one-room apartment or a movie theater.

Outgrowing Fear of Strangers

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is always flattering to have readers tell me nice things about the column and it is not lack of sincere appreciation which makes me omit these compliments from their letters. This is to let them know that their warm words of praise make this "work" the satisfying thing it has always been to me.

Mrs. J. W., whose sweet letter inspired this, wants help with the problem of timidity.

"Since her tenth week," she writes, "my daughter has been afraid of strangers. If an unfamiliar person would hold her, Joan would cry terribly. As she grew, the presence of a stranger would cause her to whimper and if they came near her, she would scream.

"At six months she stopped crying at the sight of a stranger, now at 13 months she does smile prettily for most people but only when they are at a respectable distance. If they try to hold her she has a mild case of hysterics.

"My husband is a shy introvert, but I am not. The only person she might fear is the doctor who gave her shots, and if she feared men I could understand it, but she is equally afraid of women. This makes me miserable. I want to take her visiting and show her off, as other mothers do."

If you could go back to the tenth week you might have some clue to her behavior. Someone soured her on "strangers." But she has improved. Her present timidity is typical of 12-month-old behavior and should be temporary, not an extension, necessarily, for her former timidity.

Try to be content, for the moment, to make it plain to her that no one will force themselves upon her. Let her natural curiosity about people begin to exert its influence on her sociability. If you do not impress her with the idea that she is afraid, there should be a continual improvement.

Survey on Credit Indicates Women Better Risks Than Men

By Charles Molony

Women are better credit risks than men, a survey by the Federal Reserve Board indicates.

Men's clothing stores wrote off as a "bad debt" 56 cents out of each $100 worth of sales credit last year, the Reserve Board discovered. But women's apparel stores showed only a 34-cent loss.

Reserve board officials told a reporter they don't know why this should be, but a check with credit managers of some Washington stores brought these theories:

1. When men buy clothes on credit, they usually do so because they actually need time to pay. Most of those with "substantial means" buy on a strictly cash basis.

On the other hand, many husbands don't give their wives a lot of cash to carry around, preferring for them to charge clothes even when the family budget allows a cash payment.

2. There's just one person responsible when a man buys on credit, but there are two when a married woman does. And when a husband pays the wife's bills that makes her look like a better credit risk.

3. In cases where both husband and wife work, the husband often uses his money to take care of household and "living" expenses, and the wife can put all her earnings into clothes.

Regardless of whether men or women do the paying, the Federal Reserve Board found, charge accounts bring a smaller proportion of bad debts than do installment sales.

Credit managers said that's because the longer the time to pay, the less incentive there is to complete payment—often the novelty wears off a lot of goods before they're fully paid for.

Jewelry stores suffered the biggest credit loss last year—$1.49 on each $100 in installment sales. Men's clothing stores did almost as badly, losing $1.48. Women's apparel stores lost only 61 cents.

Automobile dealers, with buyers clamoring for cars and resale prices high on used jobs, had the smallest loss of all—only 14 cents on each $100 of installment credit.

Bad debt losses on credit generally, including charge accounts as well as installment credit, ran somewhat higher last year than the year before for most lines of business.

The Reserve Board's collection of data on bad debts was the first since 1940, when the Commerce Department made the survey. A comparison of the two reports showed stores generally are losing less on credit sales now than they did before the war.

Treating the Child's Burns

When children have suffered slight burns or sunburn, an application of baking soda, as a paste, is cooling and soothing, relieving the discomfort. If the skin has reddened from a burn or scald but has not blistered or been destroyed, a paste of baking soda on a damp cloth may be placed over the burn. This baking soda compress should be kept moist, and the little patient should be kept moderately warm and quiet. Where severe burns occur, a doctor should of course be called at once.

Agency Takes Over Chores Of the Family Hired Girl

By Dorothy Carew

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Has the high cost of living made you strike household help from your budget?

No need to do that, several New York household service agencies say.

They'll supply almost any kind of service you need on a part-time basis for $1 an hour. Other agencies contract to keep your apartment shining for a flat fee every week.

Actually today you have a much better chance of getting help on that basis than a full-time, sleep-in maid, even at anywhere from $35 to $50 a week. And you can gear the service to what you want to spend.

Perhaps you want someone to do the ironing. Would you like a dependable baby sitter? How about a waitress to serve dinner? Or a seamstress to do mending or get the children's clothes in shape. Does your youngster need a chaperone to go to a party? Or would you like a governess a couple of days a week? Perhaps a girl to come in and wash dishes after a party?

The part-time service agencies can help you with any of those problems for the $1 an hour fee.

Party Help Available

If you want to give a really impressive party it will cost a little more. But you can have a butler prepare and serve drinks and canapes for $2.50 an hour. Or a cook and waitress both for a fee of $2.50 to $3 an hour.

There's nothing new about part-time maids. They have been working in American homes since the day of the "hired girl."

But the "hired girl" was a maid of all work. The new help is specialized.

If you hire a waitress today, you get a trained waitress. Don't expect the skilled ironer to clean up the kitchen. If you get a maid she'll have no truck with putting the dinner in the oven. The baby-sitter cannot be expected to do a little mending while she sits, and most cooks will not serve.

Another new wrinkle is that some of the maids do not actually work for you. They work in your home for the agency that sends them out. You pay the agency—and the agency pays the girl. If you have a complaint you tell the agency—and the agency also handles the girl's complaints against you.

Fees Are Arranged

Each agency has its onw arrangement. Taylor Maid Service, Inc., for instance, takes no chances on misunderstandings cropping up. Its service is set up on a weekly basis. Fees are based on the number of rooms in your apartment and the number of visits by the maid per week. Rates range from $3.45 for once-a-week cleaning of a one-room apartment to $21.35 for five-day service in a 5 to 5½-room apartment.

That service provides the client with a printed form stating clearly what the maid will and will not do. Laundering of household linens and children's clothes, floor, window and wall washing and dog-walking are some of the will nots.

When it comes to child-care, the agencies can fill almost any parental request.

Most of the part-time agencies can provide baby-sitters. Rates range from 75 cents to $1 an hour, and there are flat rates for four hours in the evening from $2.50 up.

One service calls its staff "proxy parents." They will take care of infants or small children during the day or evening. They will meet youngsters going through New York on their way to school or escort them to the doctor or dentist. They'll even chaperone your older offspring to a party.

Because the demand for full-time governesses has declined somewhat, many of those experts in child care are available on an hourly basis. If your child needs brushing up on French, or tutoring in a variety of subjects, arrangements can be made. Besides that the governesses will take your children to the zoo, the park or the museum on a part-time basis.

Dunked Shrimp Is Party Dish

Here's a recipe from the Fishery Council for dunked shrimp, a delightfully informal party shrimp.

The shrimps can be prepared far in advance of the meal, using some of the good fresh shrimp now being shipped here from the South. Remember to store the cooked shrimp, tightly covered, in the stock in which it was cooked. This method keeps the shrimp juicy and plump and prevents loss of weight.

DUNKED SHRIMP

1 cup mayonnaise
¼ cup chili sauce
2 tablespoons horseradish
1 teaspoon onion juice
1 teaspoon mustard seed
Cucumber strips
Carrot sticks
Flowerets of raw cauliflower
Sliced dill pickles
1 pound cooked shrimps on toothpicks.

Mix mayonnaise, chilli sauce, horseradish, onion juice and mustard seeds. Place in bowl in center of large platter. Arrange vegetables and shrimp in alternate groups around sauce. Yield: 1½ cups sauce.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Eddie Isn't Eggs-Actly Safe These Days

Henry Wallace is having his troubles, what with near-riots and barrages of eggs and tomatoes; but this newspaper seems to have the right reporter covering the story.

The assignment went to Edward T. Folliard, who used to be a war correspondent. I hope he took his helmet along.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

What a life you must lead! Don't you even take Sunday night off?

I bought a Washington Post at 9 p. m. last Sunday and read your comment that you had brought on the rainstorm that evening by washing your car.

So you must have been at work Sunday night, because the rain didn't start until about three hours before I bought the paper. Right?

Mary Catherine Cohill
Annapolis, Md.

Dear Mary Catherine:

Right and wrong. That "rain" wisecrack was in answer to a Mail Bag letter. Originally, the answer said something else. But I got caught in the rain Sunday night, so I stopped at The Post just before press time, killed the original answer, and substituted a similar number of lines in which I claimed credit for the rainstorm.

You're mighty observant—but quit exposing the secrets of my trade. Bill.

D. A. V. PUZZLE (CON'T)

Now I hear that the maximum score was 935, and that the words were: "Peth, atta, fettle, fess and esth." Personally, I don't even know what language those words are supposed to be in—but that's what they tell me.

BY THE WAY—

What manner of perversity is it that causes the two Chicago baseball teams, both hopeless cellar-dwellers, to murder the pennant contenders in one series after another?

GIVE-AWAYS

"White, female kitten, 9 weeks old." (Taylor 4308).

"Mother cat and two 12-week-old kittens." (Ludlow 5772).

CAN'T YOU JUST PICTURE THIS TOUCHING SCENE?

During these long summer afternoons I'm subject to daydreams in which I see the darndest things happening.

For example, yesterday I read Senator Hatch's statement about campaign contributions just before I closed my eyes and imagined a scene in a big Government office.

"Oh, Mildred, have you heard the perfectly wonderful news? Senator Hatch says it's okay if we contribute up to $5000 to somebody's campaign fund. We're not allowed to contribute any more than that, but I always say 'half a loaf is better than nothing at all.' Don't you, Mildred? Isn't it wonderful?"

HOT WEATHER NOTE

The carillon of a local church aroused its heat-dazed neighborhood with the usual musical fare the other morning, and then finished up with "White Christmas." One parishioner remarked:

"At first I didn't think it was very appropriate, but then I tried to imagine that the street was full of snow instead of heat waves, and doggone if I didn't feel a little cooler."

AND ARE THEY BLUE!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Senora Eva Eager to Visit U. S.

(While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

Marie Eva Duarte de Peron, beauteous blonde wife of the swashbuckling Argentine dictator, is very eager to visit the United States.

Senora Peron

Last year, the glamorous senora toured Franco Spain, France and Italy, and collected an assortment of decorations, costly gifts, and a few boos. The last were not reported in the iron-censored Argentine press.

Evita, as she is familiarly known in her country, thinks a United States junket would enhance her political ambitions. She wants to succeed her husband as President. But so far, Washington has turned a deaf ear to hints for an official invitation.

The United States Government has no intention of getting involved in Argentine politics. Also it's chary of possible incidents by hostile demonstrators.

But Evita, apparently, is not giving up hope. She has embarked on a publicity campaign to woo United States public opinion.

A few days ago, every press office in Washington received a special delivery letter from the Argentine Embassy announcing that Evita was beaming a special short-wave radio speech to the United States on old age pensions. The talk, it was stated, would be made under the auspices of the "Maria Eva Duarte de Peron Social Assistance Foundation"—of which she is the founder and sole administrative official.

The funds of this foundation are derived from so-called "voluntary" contributions from a wide variety of sources, ranging from the school children of Cordoba Province to the Buenos Aires Stock Exchange. Everyone who wants to stand in good with the powerful Evita makes a fat donation to her foundation. Its treasury now has about 35 million pesos—approximately seven million dollars.

On occasion, the "Social Assistance" activities of the foundation take an odd twist.

The latest was the presentation of handsome and completely furnished houses to each of Argentina's three Olympic games gold-medal winners. Evita announced these costly gifts with a great flourish of publicity. At home and abroad it was effusively proclaimed that she personally was bestowing these gifts.

Carefully not mentioned in the hoopla was the fact that they were being paid for with money from Evita's foundation.

Hand-Bitter

The Greek government doesn't like the salaries the United States is paying its Greek aid mission officials.

This money comes from United States taxpayers, the same as the remainder of the 500 million dollars the United States is pouring into Greece for recovery and military purposes. Also, the two toughest problems confronting aid officials are to try to get the Greek government to impose a just tax on its wealthy classes and to lop off thousands of drones on the government payroll.

Notwithstanding all this, the Greek National Economy Commission, at a recent meeting, sharply assailed United States mission pay scales. The commission was particularly outraged by one salary for $12,000 a year and another for $10,000. These were held "out of proportion not only in relation to the salaries of local employes but also to those which the United States pays its highest officers."

In Dutch

The two chiefs of the congressional Marshall Plan "Watchdog" Committee are quietly scanning the large sums Holland is spending in military operations against the newly created Indonesian Republic.

The two probers are Senator Styles Bridges, N. H., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and Representative John Taber, N. Y., chairman of the same committee in the House. These are the items that have aroused their curiosity:

Holland's share of ERP is 400 million dollars. In addition, the Dutch got a 195-million-dollar World Bank loan last year and are now seeking a 400-million-dollar loan from the Export-Import Bank. At the same time, the Dutch are spending over one million dollars a day (365 million dollars a year) to maintain a military and naval blockade of Indonesia.

Bridges and Taber want to know where the Dutch are getting the money for these costly military operations. The Dutch deny they are using ERP and loan funds.

Registration Of Men, 23, Starts Today

Registration for Selective Service in Greater Washington slowed to a walk yesterday as the last of the area's 24-year-olds finished signing up for military service.

Today and Friday, 23-year-old men will register, with 22-year-olds slated to visit registration centers Saturday and Tuesday, September 7.

At the four city-wide registration centers in the District, a total of 588 men signed up yesterday. Greatest number was handled at Dunbar High School—178. The District Building registered 168, Municipal Center signed 156, and the National Guard Armory reported 106.

Frank D. Norton, deputy D. C. draft director, announced that 5372 25-year-old men registered Monday as Selective Service got under way. For Tuesday, 3326 cards have been counted, with many from the Federal Government and private industry still being reported to District draft headquarters, 1901 D st. nw.

In Montgomery County, the Rockville draft board, located at the postoffice building, registered approximately 100 men yesterday. The Bethesda-Chevy Chase board, at the Community and Recreation Center, signed up 43. The Silver Spring board, at Jesup Blair House, Georgia ave. and Blair rd., registered 108 up to 5 p. m.

Arlington County centers signed 170 men at the Jones Building, 3150 Wilson blvd., near N. Hudson st., John Marshall School, 4751 N. 25th st., and Nellie Curtis School, 712 S. 23d st.

In Alexandria, 266 men were handled at Maury, Jefferson, Mount Vernon, George Mason, Lee and Parker-Gray Schools, and at the draft board office, Room 309, postoffice building.

Old Oak Hill Estate Goes On Sale Today

Historic Oak Hill, one-time country home of President James Monroe, near Aldie, Loudoun County, Va., will go on the auction block at 11 a. m. (EST) today.

The bankruptcy sale of the approximately 1723-acre property will be held on the premises on Route U. S. 15, between Leesburg and Aldie.

The estate is owned by Frank C. Littleton. Littleton has the right of redemption within 90 days after sale, in which case the purchaser's money will be refunded. Showing of the property has been marked by controversy. Littleton, who purchased the property in 1920 for a dairy farm, has been reported as having locked the front gate to prevent public inspection and to have threatened a deputy sheriff with a pistol. Littleton denied both reports.

U. S. to Press Indictment of Ex-Policemen

Arraignment of two former policemen in the shooting of a young girl in an after-hours club here July 29, was continued to September 30 yesterday to allow the Government to present the case directly to the grand jury.

The continuance was granted by Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott, at the request of Assistant United States Attorney J. Warren Wilson, who later told reporters that the case will go directly to the grand jury some time during this month.

The two policemen, Wayne William Edmondson, 22, and Roland H. Holifield, 26, who were serving one year's probation, are under $2000 bond, each, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. Both were dismissed from the police force August 5.

The girl, Miss Dorothy Kilmer, 20, of 1314 Fairmont st. nw., was shot while in the Palm Grove Club, 1601 14th st. nw. She told police the shooting was accidental.

The bullet lodged in her spine and she is now paralyzed from the waist down. Doctors hold little hope that she will ever walk again.

On August 26, she was transferred from Emergency Hospital to the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md., where she is now a patient.

Tunisia Ex-Ruler Dies in Exile

Pau, France, Sept. 1 (U.P.).—Sidi Mohammed Al Mounsaf, 67, exile who ruled Tunisia in the days of Axis power in North Africa, died here today.

Mounsaf's rule over two million Moslems and Jews in the French Tunisian protectorate lasted less than a year. He was forced to abdicate May 15, 1943, when Allied troops swept into Tunis.

Despite his exile, Mounsaf was revered as a spiritual leader by many thousands of Moslems.

Young Hairstyles and Fresh Smooth Skin Wanted Today

"BACKWARD, turn backward, oh, Time in thy flight. Make me a girl, again, just for tonight." So sang the poet. But modern woman (being practical and a realist) isn't content with pretty rhymes. She's doing something about it! She's taking the clock firmly in her capable hands and turning back Time. She's looking younger, acting younger, dressing younger. Her whole viewpoint is younger! The Hecht Co. applauds today's woman in her quest for youth—and we, too, do something about it! She's through with dowdy surplice dresses and bulky foundations, so we offer for her selection the same youthful fashions her daughter wears. Flare-back coats with eager swing, pencil-slim suits, flattering dresses that prettily hide pounds, expertly designed corsets and bras that curve and remold her figure in lithe lines. She's done with stringy, middle-aged hair, too! So we bring her home permanent wave kits galore—with complete equipment for keeping her hair as shining and glowing and smart as her own young daughter's. Most of all, she's done with "matron's skin!" No dull wrinkles and faded complexions for her!

So we serve her beautifully with America's finest in rich creams, lotions and specially designed preparations to help her keep her skin as alive and glowing as a girl's. Yes, modern woman faces life with a young viewpoint and The Hecht Co. is happy to meet her more than half way.

Want A Younger Looking Skin? Try Hormone Cream

WE had a long chat with The Hecht Co.'s stylist the other day. Fall fashions had been our original topic . . . but suddenly the stylist said . . . "Of course, the return to lady-like elegance highlights a woman's complexion. This season it is really imperative for a woman's complexion to be fresh, glowing and well-cared for." And we said, slyly, "How about that after-thirty complexion?" "Ah-h-h," said the stylist . . . "that's where Helena Rubinstein comes in. She has a scientifically prepared cream containing natural estrogen . . . essentially estrone and estradiol. Both are ingredients which help achieve beauty for your skin by retarding the effects of the years! After cleaning thoroughly use a half-teaspoon full, massaging gently. Leave it on over night. The result is a refreshed, soothed and smoothed complexion . . . a-glow with that beautifully fragrant, clear loveliness!" The price is only 4.20 (tax included) on the Street Floor in the Washington and Silver Spring Stores.

Boon To Busy Women—A Home Permanent Wave

FOR the woman with little leisure time and a practical eye on the budget, Richard Hudnut has put out a real boon . . . a fine "Home Permanent Wave Set." Each kit comes with curlers, lotions and complete instructions.

For the busy woman the advantages are these . . . she can give herself a soft, manageable permanent in the privacy of her own home; she can do other things around the house while it is "taking." She saves an appreciable amount of money, too. The Hecht Co. cosmetic buyer, in an interview yesterday said the Hudnut Wave is one of the best . . . and that results are excellent. The price of the wave set, he said, is 3.05, including tax, on the Street Floor in the Washington and Silver Spring Stores.

Woman's Taste Is Growing Younger

Women Like the Young Flattery of Slimming Wool Suit-Dresses

IN answer to the widespread demand of women today for more youthful styling in half-size dresses, The Hecht Co. today announced that their women's dress department is featuring a flattering new Fall suit-dress in sizes 14½ to 24½ . . . just the sort of costume that's right for any, and every occasion!

Far from being stamped as "matronly," this two-piece outfit is as young in appearance as it is practical and serviceable. It's styled with a gracefully-gored skirt . . . so slimming, it seems actually to whittle pounds away. But the big interest is in the jacket! Soft, beautifully detailed, and unlined . . . it's cut in easy lines, trim around the waist, single breasted, with a flattering cardigan neckline and an intricate scroll work of self-embroidery heaped on the shoulders (this latter touch focusing attention to your features—and away from your more mature figure).

The fabric is 100% all wool, from famous Pacific Mills . . . long wearing, yet soft and pliable enough to take this more feminine young styling. Not only will you find this suit-dress in black, but for those who feel that warm color is even more youthful and becoming, there is a vibrant green and a rich grey—both shades that you'll see again and again in the fashion picture this fall.

You'll find this suit-dress in the women's dress department at The Hecht Co. . . . on the third floor in the Washington store, and on the second floor in the Silver Spring store. That price again, only 22.95.

Women Want Wool Gabardine in Youthful Suits, Pencil-Slim

EVER since high moguls of the fashion world predicted the return of slimmer, straighter skirts this Fall, women everywhere have been praising this more youthful, more wearable silhouette—and adapting it to their personal wardrobes. Particularly is this true of those women who wear larger sizes . . . for this pared-down line is a veritable boon to those who want their costumes to trim their figures.

In contrast to the bulk of now-dated "New Look" pads and gathers, The Hecht Co. is introducing this "Now Look" silhouette in women's sizes . . . in a carefully tailored suit of pure wool gabardine. Every inch of this chic costume is youthful, slim, pared down! First, there's that slender, gently-gored skirt . . . wonderfully becoming to every figure. Next, there's the jacket, in this case single breasted and simply fastened with four self-covered buttons. The details are soft—a three tier pocket, a tailored collar that seems to invite your own personal accessory touches.

The fabric, of course, is all wool gabardine . . . long a favorite of discriminating women. The colors, too, are well worth mentioning. For each looms large in the fashion news. There is a warm, rich brown, a glowing wine and a deep green . . . all three keyed to blend perfectly with Fall's new accesory shades.

This particular suit can be found in the women's suit department at The Hecht Co. . . . on the third floor in the Washington store, and on the second floor in the Silver Spring store. It comes in a size range of 16½ to 24½. Retail price, 55.00.
